At the Movies Last Night

"Bellboy 13."

The feature picture for the early part of this week at Allen's is a comedy starring Douglas McLean as "Bellboy 13." In this really comic comedy McLean fills several roles, but as the title indicates his starring is enacted in the guise of a bellhop in a large and fashionable hotel evidently not far from Hollywood. As a comedy should be, this one is full of fun and laughter from start to finish, and to those who appreciate a hearty laugh this picture will be very pleasing. The story turns on the fact of a wrathy uncle threatening to cut off his nephew, who up to that time had looked to him as his visible means of support. The cause of this upheaval in their relations is a charming young movie actress, who adds to the complications by siding with the uncle in an effort to induce the nephew to turn to honest the facture of the picture is the acting of "Wolf," a remarkable police dog, who cleverly carries a difficult role in many of the thrilling episodes in which the film abounds.

An educational picture showing how enamelware utensils are made in the London plant of the McClary Manufacturing Company was as interesting as one could wish. The duce the nephew to turn to honest toil. He takes his uncle at his word and dons the uniform of a bellboy and starts on his duties in the hotel in with orders the manager to fire him. This, the manager agrees to, when to his surprise the boy shows a union card and follows this up with a general strike throughout the hotel. In uncle the boy calls off the strike with the understanding that he be allowed to marry the actress, and the story ends as love stories should.

The English play, "A Sister To Assist 'Er." is another comedy, and is a wonderfully true characterization of the English Whitechapel type at its funniest. Although not advertised as the feature at Allen's, this picture is really of feature calibre, and is replete with chuckles from its introduction till the end leaves on with aching sides and a feeling that you have laughed your limit. The other picture is an excellent educational one and depicts with remarkable clearness by moving pic Extremely simple in theme, yet splendid in characterizations and ex-ceedingly rich in that magnificent color of the great Canadian outdoors, 'Glengarry Schooldays," Ernest Shipman's elaborate motion picture version of Ralph Connor's novel, made a real hit when it was shown for the first time in London at the Grand last night.

The enthusiasm and the intense interest displayed by those who wit-nessed the premier showing of this Canadian-made production, presages well for the success of the future Made-in-Canada films if their quality does not deteriorate, and proves that the average Canadian movie fan is anxious to patronize pictures filmed
