subscribers for discovering a north-west passage; in which their barbayity to the natives and their fervants, was proved by fundry affidavits, having never attempted to civilize the one, or fent over a clergyman for the inftruction of the other, nor kept up the least appearance of religion in any factory in the Bay: yet I do not pretend to affign these circumstances of danger as the motive of this new concern for the spiritual welfare of their people; nor of the following directions fent at the same time to Mr. Isbester and council at Prince of Wales's-fort, viz - 23d; As we have nothing more at beart then the preservation of our fattories, the security of our people, and the increase of our trade, therefore we direct that nothing may be omitted, that may strengthen the former and extend the latter; to which end we firstly order; that all possible encouragement be given to the natives, by treating them civilly, and dealing justly with them on all occasions; and we recommend it to you to use our servants under your command in such manner, that they may esteem as well as fear you. If instructions like these proceed from real com-punction and a just abhorrence of their former misconduct, part of the end aimed at by the proceedings against them is obtained; and should they be fo formhate as to survive the charge still. to be brought against them, by the merchants and manufacturers of Great Britain, and find interest enough to keep poliellion of their charter and invaluable monopoly; I hope they will give no room for the application of a centure, that is due only to the character of the prince of hypocrites:

The devil was fick—the devil a monk would be to The devil was well—the devil a monk was he.
