

CONTENTS.

xix

PART THREE.

NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

1867-1900.

CHAPTER XVI.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROGRESS UNDER FEDERAL INSTITUTIONS.

PAGE

The Party System in the Federation.—Sir John Macdonald Tries to Eliminate it by a Coalition.—Refusal of Dorion, Brown, and Other Liberals to Support the Policy.
—The Character of the First Cabinet.—Position of Dr.
Tupper and D'Arcy McGee.—Formation of the Conservative and Liberal Parties of the New Dominion.—The Provincial Politics of Upper Canada or Ontario.—Sand-field Macdonald.—M. Chauveau, Premier in Lower Canada, or Quebec.—In the Other Provinces.—Position and Functions of the Governor-General.—Gradual Changes.—Lord Dufferin and Lord Lorne.—The Letellier Controversy.—Lord Lansdowne and Lord Stanley of Preston (Earl Derby).—Lord Aberdeen and his Controversy with Sir C. Tupper.—Characters and Services of Canadian Governors-General.—Provincial Politics and the Lieutenant-Governors.—Value of the Latter Office.—Letellier and Angers.—Dual Representation.— Discontent in Nova Scotia.—Tupper and Howe Meet in the Province and in London.—Settlement of a Serious Agitation.—Great Qualities of Joseph Howe.—The Hudson's Bay Company and the North-West.—The Riel Rebellion and Entry of Manitoba into the Union.—Macdougall, Schultz, Wolseley, Taché.—The Territories Created and Gradually Organized.—Murder of D'Arcy McGee.—The New Brunswick School Question.—The Canadian Pacific Charter Question.—Overthrow of the Macdonald Government at Ottawa.—The Mackenzie Administration and the Prolonged Period of Conservative Rule Following its Defeat in 1878.—The Second North-West Rebellion.—Its Suppression and the Execution of Riel.—Racial Agitation and Controversies.—Mercier in Quebec.—D'Alton McCarthy and his Policy of

PAGE

344

375