Hon. Mr. Turner, who has just reached his 85th year, retired over a year ago against his wish, and now accepts as a compliment this mark of confidence, though the appointment is only an acting one.
Sir Richard McBride is confined to his bed. Several attacks of influenza have seriously weakened his system, and he is now in a low condition. His doctor advises that he return to Canada, as his best chance of recovery.

He enlisted in the 104th Regiment and after it went to England was transferred to the 26th. Woods, post office inspector for New Brunswick.

Hart, of Athens, Georgia.

FIGHT, WORK, PAY

Such is the Keynote of Country Wide Advertising Campaign to Promote National Service.

Ottawa, June 1—At the offices of the National Service Board of Canada it is announced that plans are completed for a systematic advertising campaign, beginning at once, to arouse in Canada something of the win-the-war earnestness now dominant in Great Britain and France.
Though the war has been going on nearly three years, and though our gallant overseas contingents have won undying fame for Canada, it is beginning to be realized that most of us here at home have hardly yet waked up to the nature of the struggle in which we are engaged. Like Great Britain herself, we are slow to be aroused—slow to shake off the "Business as usual" complacency. We are following the Motherland's progressive changes of attitude—but because we are in the path of no Zepplins, suffer no bombardments, and are weeks instead of hours from the firing line, we are months behind in evolving that grim, single-minded determination that is ready for any service, any sacrifice.

Our public men returning from overseas are deeply impressed by the detached attitude of the average Canadian toward the war, as compared with the Briton or Frenchman. It is just this detachment which has prevented Canada's whole weight from being felt behind our divisions in France—and it is from this attitude that the National Service Board plans to arouse us, using straight-from-the-shoulder appeals in newspapers as a potent means to this end.

Never has the power of national publicity been so convincingly demonstrated as in the British campaigns, first for recruits, then for supplementary supplies and equipment, and later for thrift and the purchase of war savings certificates. It is along the latter lines—and the allied one of production which is so applicable to Canada—that the first series of national service advertisements have been designed. To produce more, to waste less, particularly of food; to eliminate extravagance of every kind; to save intelligently and systematically as to lend the savings to the nation—these are the key-notes of the calls to service which will be made to every Canadian. This is not a propaganda about these national messages, nothing overdrawn or melodramatic. They are plain, straightforward, intensely practical, and dead-simple, telling why, and particularly how, everyone can help instead of perhaps unconsciously hindering.

A GENTLE THRUST AT PROFITEERS

The Moose Jaw Farmer and His Load of Wheat; Amateur Gardening is Not Enough

(Halifax Chronicle.)
We are gratuitously furnished with the thrilling information, through an alleged despatch from London, that "King George can be seen most afternoons in Windsor Park cultivating a potato patch which he started himself when the general allotment scheme was initiated. Prince Mary is also the owner of an allotment adjoining her father's, and one of the young princes puts in a good deal of time in a small patch of vegetables."
This is a very interesting and important, indicating as it does that there can no longer be any fear of vegetable famine in the vicinity of Windsor Castle, but we can scarcely see clearly how it justifies perpetual daily squealings in Halifax that Canada is facing imminent "famine" and is on the verge of "starvation," the only escape from which lies in digging up back yards and planting "garden sashes."
Be it distinctly understood that we have all possible admiration for gardens and gardeners. The most distinguished and distant of our own ancestors was a gardener who might have made a great success of the job if his wife had not "hatted in" and "nosed" with his long apple tree while the fruit was still green. But we have never met a gardener of the domestic or back-yard variety who had accumulated wealth from his own soil. Our personal observation and enquiries rather lead us to the conclusion that the gardener, of great expectations and high hopes, after much expenditure of the sweat of his brow and considerable strong language, directed against weather and grubs, gets back half of what he puts into his garden. It is a very fortunate person indeed. Nevertheless, gardening has its joys as well as its sorrows notwithstanding the fact that in it more than in any other field of human endeavor, "Man never is, but always to be blest." Its chief rewards are spiritual and physical discipline. Most personally conducted gardens are rich in these by-products.

But this is not an essay on gardening. It is intended to be suggestive of a better way to "avoid starvation" and how to escape "facing famine." To begin with, a somewhat significant incident is reported from Moose Jaw. A worthy farmer, of that poetically named neighborhood took a load of wheat to market the other day. It was "No. 2 hard," the price of which that day, on the Winnipeg produce exchange, was $2.80 per bushel. He "figured" on getting $2.50 at least, and possibly $2.60 for his wheat. Valuing himself was vouchsafed to him much more promptly than it ever is to the amateur gardener. He got $1.22 for his wheat and was mightily glad. The difference between that and the Winnipeg price of $2.80 and the consumers all over Canada "got it in the neck" proportionately. The Moose Jaw farmer probably had

ALLEGED BIGAMY CASE

Moncton, N. B., June 1—The case against Chester C. Trenholm, a returned soldier, charged with bigamy, was begun today before Judge Stevens. The accused was arrested in St. John Wednesday night by Chief Rideout, on a warrant. Jas. Friel, K.C., appeared for the accused, and Francis P. Murphy, for complainant. Charles Robinson, of St. John, secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission, is here in connection with the case.
The complainant testified that she was first married to Isaac C. Burpee, who died in the early nineties. She said her name was Margaret Cunningham Burpee Trenholm, and that she met the accused at her uncle's house, Bellisle Creek, in 1901, and they were married the following year. She said she had two sons by her first husband, that she married Trenholm in Providence (R. I.), and that three weeks later he left her for the first time. She traced him and took him back to live with her. They went to Ottawa and then came to the maritime provinces. Returning to Boston, she said she left Trenholm, and the court there gave her a separate support allowance, which she said she accused did not pay.
The witness said that in the fall of 1908 she returned to Canada and found Chester Trenholm living with Margaret Walls. After this she went back to the states, and next time she saw Chester Trenholm was in St. John, when on trial for money he owed her. Since then she had never seen him until he was brought into court. Complainant said she had spent the last year and a half in England with her son, a returned soldier.

MASTERLY INCAPACITY

(Halifax Chronicle.)
We are told in several different kinds of headlines that "the one big man in the present situation is Sir Robert Borden," that he is "the complete master of the situation," and that "the political situation at the federal capital is absolutely dominated by Sir Robert Borden." We have been vouchsafed similar "information" for many months past and yet what has the "masterly domination" of Sir Robert brought the country to? Where was his "absolute domination" when he allowed recruiting to become as "dead as Julius Caesar," as his organs now say it is? Where was his "masterful power" when he inaugurated the National Service scheme which all Canada now knows is a huge failure? What was his "dominating" personality doing when he promulgated the fiasco of the Home Defence scheme, under which hardly a man was recruited throughout the whole of Canada. And now he has so dominated the political situation at Ottawa that chaos confronts the government and parliament, and he is faced with the alternatives of resigning or the opposition to join him in coalition, of a radical reconstruction of his government or of dropping his Conscription Bill altogether.
The truth is that Sir Robert Borden has never measured up to his opportunities and has never been equal to the situation which confronted him, and which demanded leadership of the highest quality and government concerned only with the interests of the state.

Quartette of Recruits Sign

But four men were secured by the various units recruiting throughout the city yesterday. Of these, Sir 9 Siege Battery got two and the Divisional Signal Section and the Forestry Company one each. The little whirlwind campaign is stirring the province and although no St. John men came forward yesterday, the general situation is thought by those in charge of the recruiting for this unit to be very promising. The four men who signed yesterday were:
EARL SPINNEY, St. George, No. 9 Siege Battery.
HAROLD NIGHTINGALE, New Bedford (Mass.), No. 9 Siege Battery.
R. N. WETMORE, St. John, Divisional Signal Section, C. E.
G. L. CHOZIER, Kings county, Forestry Company.
About seven more men are required to fill up the Machine Gun Draft. Fortunately for those who wish to sign up with this unique corps, several men are to be taken on over-strength, and so one and all who wish to join can do so by applying to Sergt. W. C. Ramsay at the chief recruiting office in Prince William street. Lieut. J. K. Scummet, O. C. of the unit, received a letter yesterday from Pte. G. Dyke, who is recruiting around Perth. Pte. Dyke says that he will be bringing at least two new men with him when he returns the first of the week. The machine gun drill is interesting in the extreme and the men are all very much taken up with it.
Lieut. Wetmore Wins Medal.
Ten Canadian officers were gazetted at London on Monday as having been awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous bravery. One officer, well known in Fredericton, is among the number. Lieut. George Harold Wetmore, son of George L. Wetmore.
