N. Y. DETECTIVE HERE HAS BEEN ON BIG CASES

Lieut. Jas. W. McKittrick 19 Years in Battle With Crime

Although this was the first time that he had been in New Brunswick, Lieut. Detective James W. McKittrick, of the New York police force, who arrived here yesterday in connection with the Samuel Halport case, had been in practically all the rest of Canada during his 19 years on the force of the United States metropolis. He is attached to District Attorney Job H. Banton's office, which is located at the Tompkins, New York city, and during his career had been in every country in Europe and South America.

ON WHITTEMORE CASE
Last Christmas Lieut. McKittrick took back from Field, B. C., a man wanted in New York, and only a few days ago was busy in connection with the Whittemore case. He took these Whittemore to Buffalo to stand trial. When acquitted there, Whittemore was taken to Baltimore by Lieut. McKittrick, in company with Baltimore detectives, and was sentenced to die and his accomplices given from forty years to life in prison.

PRaises SAINT JOHN
The visiting detective was much taken with the hills of Saint John and said that the people here ought to be made to know the climate and hills in their own country. He likened this to Kansas City.

He spoke in a complimentary manner of the efficiency of the local detective force and said that they replied with promptness to telegrams and inquiries, much better in fact, than some of the larger cities which were supposed to be better equipped.

As Hiram Sees It

THE SETTLEMENT
—I been settin' on the verandah watchin' the apple birds in a big old crab-apple tree that's just come into bloom. They're so light they kin set on the very tip of a limb an' peck at the blossoms. They know a good thing. They was eight of 'em there this mornin'—when they was n' eatin' they was turnin' their little tufted heads from one side to the other—or cockin' an eye up to the sun as if they wasn't a care in the world. All at once—without a chirp that I could hear—the ball eight of 'em took wing at once and went off in a flock for some other adventure. I s'pose they hev some sort of a sign that I humans don't understand—but they don't stay away very long from the old crab-apple tree. I judge from the noise the crows was makin' out back fer a spell this afternoon they must be goin' to hev an election. Hanner says we got to hev some bird houses next year—an' I calculate that means I'll hev to turn carpenter fer a spell next winter. Well, I guess I owe it to the apple birds to do somethin' fer our feathered friends—yes, sir—I do so.
