Fables On Health

DIET FOR THE BABY

DIET for baby? A much asked question and one that has an answer dependent largely upon the child.

But if the baby is normal, this diet applied in the second year has been found by health experts to produce robust, healthy kids and lassies.

For breakfast give the child from three to four big spoonfuls of well-cooked cereal. Put emphasis on the "well-cooked." One glass of milk, a slice of bread that is a day old.

About 10 or 11 in the morning cereal again may be served or fruit juice, either orange or prune pulp or apple sauce.

Then, for 12 to 1, have lunch. A cereal again may be served, or some broth with cereal in it or potato soup. After the fourteenth month eggs may be fed the child, a cup of milk, a slice of slightly stale bread and a well-strained vegetable. A glass of milk and bread at 3.30 and a light supper of cereal, milk and fruit.

Adventures of the Twins

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
THE GRANDFATHER CLOCK

Tick Toek gathered up his key and oil-can and belatedly motioned for the Twins to follow.

"I have to do a lot of clock mending tonight all over the world," said he. "We shall have to be moving. The next place we must go to is the house where an old grandfather clock lives. He is quite a pet of the family, but, like a lot of old people, is crosshatched and cantankerous and nobody can do anything with him but me. Come on, kiddies."

It was very dark by this time except for a baby moon and the stars. With magic shoes it is no trouble to find one's way anywhere.

So as Tick Toek, the little clock fairy, trotted ahead, the Twins followed, Nancy carrying the big key and Mick the oil-can, which Tick Toek had trusted to their care.

They went on and on, and by and by they came to a big stone house set in a grove of trees.

"Sh!" whispered Tick Toek. "I think they are having a party as there is music and so much light. But the old clock is in a back hall so they won't know the difference. We'll go in by the study window. It, too, will be empty tonight."

Soon the three of them were inside the big house, tiptoeing softly through a room lined with book-shelves on all sides.

Tick Toek opened a door into a dimly lit back hall and beckoned the children to follow.

"He's asleep," he whispered pointing to a dark corner where an old grandfather clock stood on the floor, his hands drooping listlessly. Not a sound was he making.

Suddenly he woke up and started to tick furiously. "Who's there?" he said hoarsely. "Is that another pesky mouse?"

"No, no, Granddaddy, it's only me," said Tick Toek quickly. "We have come to fix you up."

"Oh!" said the old clock in a relieved tone. "I do need a tonic. I guess, I'm all run down. The people here are kind but they don't understand me. Times are hard and they used to be and people have lost the art of patience. I remember well when I was being made that the man who made me took days and days on one wheel alone. You don't find patience like that any more."

"Tut, tut, Granddaddy," said Tick Toek, climbing up and sitting on the old clock's wooden bonnet. "You mustn't get sour. It never does any good. Besides, I am here, and I am going to fix you up like new. A little oil and a good dusting out with my bellows, a tightened screw here and there, and your weights wound up snugly on their spools. That's all you need."

"My my!" sighed the old clock. "I feel better already." And he looked at the moon painted on his forehead, became bright with happiness.

"That oil loosens up all my rheumatic joints. Tick-toek, tick-toek! I certainly feel better!"

To Be Continued.

Retiring Supt. Is Presented Gifts

ST. STEPHEN, Sept. 3.—Miss Arthureta Branscombe, the retiring superintendent of the Chipman Memorial Hospital, who has served nearly 25 years at that institution, was given a reception at the Robinson Memorial Nurses' Home by the board of directors, medical staff and the ladies' advisory board of the hospital last week.

The president, A. A. Leflin, in a happy speech, presented Miss Branscombe a check for $600, a gift from the Hospital Board. Dr. Bunker, on behalf of the visiting physicians, asked her to accept a wrist watch set in platinum with sapphires and diamonds. Mrs. Manford Robinson, president of the ladies' advisory board, presented a handsome silk umbrella.

reds, greens and yellows. The lines of the frock are straight and slim, and terminate in a pleated flounce. Materials which are closely woven are well suited to the flounce treatment, and when the frock is of printed chiffon or crepe, they are particularly effective.

The dance frock for summer, which is really smart, boasts either a flounce, or an apron front or tunic of fluttering lace, and so follows the mode of feminine lines.
