belt were doing, and we tried to understand their position. "Our reward came at the time of the depression, our western factories were producing 70,000 pairs of shoes per day. I got a wire today that this production had been increased to 104,000 pairs, and we are sold up four or five months ahead. Now I believe that if we expect to get the best out of our customers we must sincerely and earnestly strive to give them the best that is in us. One of the most serious mistakes of the last eighteen months has been the unwillingness of the merchants and manufacturers to take their losses quickly. "Out of the sorrow and depression of the war we have learned some good lessons. I am told that an aviator has little difficulty in learning to fly, even that a young man who has driven an automobile can easily learn the art of flying and fly with considerable ease. The trouble comes when he attempts to
