"There is another thing to do. If we for the sentiment expressed in the dress, and for the manner in which you have to take into account the financial have been good enough to receive them. do not flatter myself that there is not little of the exaggeration of friendship in this address; but I am not sur- Liberal party in all the phases of its hisrised, nevertheless, when I remember am treading the soil which patriots Agriculture suffers to-day. This is an have trod, and that the country has agricultural country. Here you toil, ever been, not only since Confederation, but since 1887, the bulwark of the popular cause. (Cheers.) The cause of the people has now won a brilliant triumph oughout this broad Dominion of Canada. I do not attribute to myself the merit of this victory. It is due to the Liberal population of this country; it is due to the valiant lieutenants I have with me, and especially to our friends of the Conservative party, who, without changing their principles, found that their duty as citizens was to depart from party traditions and ally themselves with a party which gave them at east a guarantee of moderation.

"When I arrived in Ottawa I found that the post of senator for the division of Delorimier was vacant. It was not vacant because our friends had not wished to fill it, but it was vacant for reasons which I do not wish to discuss o-day, but which we may discuss on the floor of the house of commons before ong. I gave the place to my old friend, Mr. Bechard, who sat in parliament since 1867, whom whom I sat myself since 1874. I intended that, if the opportunity was given me, Mr. Bechard was the first man to whom I would offer a senatorship, and I have been able to carry out my intention. Now, you speak of the victory which we have gained; it is a great victory; but the greatest victory is never gained except at the cost of certain sacrifices. One of those sacrifices was the defeat of Mr. Tarte. I was wrong when I say defeat,' for Mr. Tarte was never defeated; but that victory was taken from him by illegal and illicit methods. If there is a man whom I wanted for a colleague it is Mr. Tarte, and I wished to have him for a colleague. I cannot do better than address you, my old electors of St. John's and Iberville, and ask you not to elect him by an immense maority, but to elect him by acclamation. Mr. Bechard has compared Mr. Tarte to St. Paul. That is an ambitious comparison, no doubt, but not an unjust one. Mr. Tarte began his political career by ersecuting the Christians. I was one the Christians whom he persecuted. Laughter.) He dealt me some hard (Laughter.) He dealt the soll yes, I blows. I bear the marks yet. Yes, I found Mr. Tarte a good fighter. would rather have him with me than If the Bleus have lost him t is their own fault. Mr. Tarte left heir party on the day that he found he could no longer march in the ranks side by side with men like Sir Hector Langevin, Connolly and McGreevy. I ask you to give Mr. Tarte the unanimous support of your county and to send him to represent your county as minister of public works." (Cheers.) "You say in the address that I have for the compliment and accept it. The present administration can stand comarison with any administration. There has not been such an administration in Canada since 1867. For the moderation and talent of its members-I speak not of myself-I need only mention Sir Oliver Mowat, who, to settle a great question, has consented to serve as second in its ranks, to aid me in rendering justice to whom justice is due. Then we have Sir Richard Cartwright. It was expected that he would be minister of finance; but, from personal reasons, of which I shall not speak to-day, but of which he will speak himself before long, he preferred the post of minister of and commerce. Then we have Mr. Davies, ex-Premier of Prince Edward Island; we have Mr. Fielding, who resigned his post of prime minister of Nova Scotia to join my government, and Mr. Blair, who resigned a similar ost in New Brunswick. As to my friend Mr. Tarte, you know him. As to my friends of the province of Quebec, you know them, Sir Henri Joly de Lottiere, 'Our Mr. Joly' (cheers)-his is Mr. Fitzpatrick an illustrious name. a young advocate of talent, of whom you will hear soon. Mr. Fisher is a practical farmer; Mr. Mulock, Mr. Paterson, are well known men. I could go through the whole list. Each of the names is a guarantee of peace, harmony and prosperity for the country. There one name with which I shall conclude. It is that of Mr. Dobell. I was asked

"He is an old Conservative. Gentlein the Liberal party, as in the Kingdom of Heaven, those who come at the eleventh hour are treated on the same footing as those who came at the The moment they work as they should work they are admitted to an equal footing with their fellow-workers. Mr Dobell is a great Canadian, a great iness man, and it is my desire that Laurier administration shall be known as an administration and a govrnment of business men.

why I took Mr. Dobell.

"It is said that we are not united; that we have too many ministers. The aw obliges us to have so many portfolos, but before long I hope to reorganthe ministry with a view to economy. "Another reproach is that my proramme is not defined. Gentlemen, on that point it is easy for me to satisfy curiosity. The programme of the Liberal party in power is exactly the same as the programme of the Liberal party in opposition, Nothng more, nothing less. What we advocated in opposition we will put into effect cided. On the 23rd of June last we re-ceived a mandate from the electors to change the present tariff. But how to

"On that point I am ready to speak.

I have declared while in opposition, and I say now, if we are in favor of a change in the tariff, we wish to proceed with caution, and in such a way as to cause no perturbation in the public mind His Attitude in Regard to the Tar- and not to disturb existing industries. We shall not proceed hastily. Our next session will only be called for the purpose of voting supplies, and nothing more .We do not intend to introduce any important legislation. The consideration of tariff changes will be ad-journed to the session of January or February, and from now until that time my colleague, Mr. Fielding, will inter-view the different business men in the St. John and Iberville; ladies and country, and will prepare a tariff which will be of a nature to satisfy all established industries and to lighten the bur-condition of the country, there is another immense interest which has always been the basis of the policy of the tory. It is the agricultural interests from the rising to the setting of the sun. Yet, at the end of the year, you can do little more than make both ends meet. The reason is that there has been a diminution in the price of the products you sell. It is not possible that any government can increase the price of your crops; but there is one thing we can do. We can diminish the price of the goods you have to purchase. We can diminish the price of the articles you consume. We can, to a certain extent also, increase the price of your products by facilitating communication with the European market. We can increase the price by facilitating transintend to effect before long.

We have in the Northwest immense lands. You have good land here. In to give homes to millions of men.

we were promised it should, although all was quiet. our debt has increased. The interest on This outbreak resulted in the calling thither a good farming population.

Conservative party have always represented us in England as being rebellious, and many English newspapers believed that if the Liberal party attained power the first thing they would do would be to break the tie which bound Canada to the mother country. Gentlemen, you are French and so am 1; but 1 hesitate not to declare that I am a loval British subject. We are free here in Canade, and we are loval because we appreciate the blessings of the freedom which we enjoy. There are present, perhaps, some still living of those who once took up arms against the British Crown. I hesitate not to say that if 1 had lived in those days I should possibly have done as they did. But, gentlemen, we do not live in 1837. We now enjoy the blessings for which our fathers fought, and, as we enjoy the privileges of Britsih citizenship we shall not evade its duties.

"To-day your principal market is the formed a strong cabinet. I thank you British market. That market is open equally to all farm products of all countries in the world; to the farm products of the American continent; to those of the Argentine Republic; to those of Russia; to those of India. Yet it is possible for us to make an arrangement by which England will give us a market for our products if we give something like reciprocity to certain English products. I am for that policy.

"If, on the other hand, however, our relations with England are excellent, I am sorry to say that our relations with the neighboring republic are not so good. For twenty years or more the American and Canadian governments have not treated each other with the consideration they ought to have shown I propose to show more cordial relations with the American republic; to treat the Americans, not as enemies, but as friends. I know that there are people who pique themselves upon their loyalty, and who believe that to be friendly to the United States is to be disloyal to England. I do not share that idea. We can be on good terms with everybody, and that is the end which we have set before us. If we establish good relations with the United States, we may, perhaps, have the benefit of the reopening of negotiations and the renewal of the treaty of reciprocity which we formerly had, during a time which was the golden age for our farmers.

"Now, there is the school question. That is a question which has excited the public mind for many years. For six years the Conservative government had it in hand, and they could not settle it. Yet, when we had been in power for only fifteen days the good Conservative press calls upon us to settle the quesnot ask for six years to settle that question; I shall hardly ask six months. (Cheers.) But, if I am not mistaken, that question will be settled in less than six months by justice being done to whom justice is due. We are a mixed population in Canada. Providence has not joined us together here that we may fight among ourselves. We are here to live in peace and in harmony, and it is by addressing ourselves to the consciences of our fellow citizens that we hope to settle this question. I have declared on the floor of the house of commons; I asked to be sent to the Bridewell. Lizhave declared it in Ontario; I have de | zie is the Jane Cakebread of Chicago. clared it in Quebec-that the only means to settle that question was, not by coercion, but by conciliation. I believe that the future will show that I was right to five years she has ben under arrest 700 500 and 600 yards, there were 81 enspeak as I spoke. I have undertaken to discuss the opportuneness of having a change in the tariff. That has been decided. On the 23rd of June last we received a mandate from the electors to change the present tariff. But how to and that responsibility I accept, and I hope, before six months I shall have the pleasure of being able to say, 'the promise I gave you I have kept, and here 15 the question settled.' (Cheers.)

"Now gentlemen, a last word. In the fight which we have made, and which ended last June, all did their duty, but The Members of the Council Elect the province of Quebec especially did its duty. Immediately, however, on the anement of our victory the Tories of Ortario commenced to cry 'French dom-inatiou'; 'Here is the first day of French domination.' Gentlemen, the ministry I formed was my first reply to that cry. The province of Quebec is at my back. I know it, and I am proud of it; but 1 know my province and I know that the province of Quebec wishes no one to dominate over her, but neither does she wish to dominate over any other. What she wants is equal justice, equal rights, fr all, and I speak in the name of the province of Quebec, when I say that she will never abuse her influence, but will use it to do justice to the entire population, without distinction of race or

Quit Work. Cleveland, Aug. 3.-The renewal of the strike at the Brown Hoisting Works resulted in blood on Saturday. The trouble began early in the morning, when a mob surrounded the house of one of the non-union workmen, and bombarded it with stones and bricks, breaking the windows and even smashing the weatherboards. The police, hearing of this trouble, prepared for an outbreak at noon when the non-union men should be dismissed from work. A party of these workmen, disregard-

SURROUNDED BY FIRE.

Narrow Escape of a Settler and His Family in Sumas.

A resident in this city has received a letter from Sumas, giving a graphic description of the hair-breadth escape of a family there from bush fires. Mr. Blistowe and his family, consisting of his wife and son retired to bed as usual on Monday night, the 20th ult., says the letter, but were soon awakened by intense heat and smoke, which was almost suffocating them. Fires were burning fiercely all round, but at that time the house was safe. An hour or so afterwards, however, the boy informed his seeing that it was impossible to check the flames, they hastily gathered a few clothes and left their home. The whole country seemed on fire and the only possible means of escape was by a trail to the river. Before they had proceeded far, they heard the piteous howls of their dog, who, tied up in the kennel, had been forgotten in the excitement. parents that the roof had caught, and had been forgotten in the excitement. The boy at once bravely at once went back to rescue the poor brute, and after some difficulty freed it, and then made his way back to where he had left his parents.

The fires were gradually gaining on the fugitives ad trees were falling in all directions, adding greatly to their danger. When about half way Mrs. Linstowe dropped, being too fatigued to go any further. Her husband exclaimed, "It is now or never, lass," and with "I am not here to boast, but I shall his assistance she managed to struggle on until, more dead than alive, the three reached the river. Here they found that the settlers had been driven out of their houses by the floods, so that it was with difficulty that could find a place of shelter. All Mr. Blistowe's possessions were destroyed by fire, with the exception of the clothes they had on their backs,-News-Advertiser.
