

SECRET PAPERS SHOW PROPAGANDA OF IRISH

Workings of "Foreign Department" in Europe and U. S. Disclosed—Friendly Attitude Established in All Countries Except Germany.

(Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Company.)

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.

London, Aug. 11.—The methods of Irish Republican propaganda through out the world and further light on the dispute between President Eamon De Valera and Irish Americans, headed by Daniel T. Cohalan, of the New York Supreme Court, are disclosed in the report of the Department of Foreign Affairs of the Irish republic, found among the photographic copies of the secret papers of the Irish cabinet which are now in the possession of the Public Ledger foreign service. It shows that the Irish had driven for 219,000,000 in the United States was launched by President De Valera, in the wake of Judge Cohalan's opposition. Another point of importance is that President De Valera himself proposed Sinn Féin negotiations with Russia.

"The coordination of Irish opinion in the United States, as well as in Canada and Australia, has received attention from the President, and certain proposals in this connection will be put before you. You will also be asked to take certain steps in connection with the campaign for the recognition of the Irish republic in the United States."

This paragraph in the report of the Sinn Féin acting minister for foreign affairs is believed to refer to the Valera's request for $1,500,000, to be used in American during the presidential campaign, a request which was approved by the Sinn Féin parliament, the Dail Eireann, as reported in yesterday's article.

Report of Foreign Minister.

The report itself, which deals with efforts of Irish propaganda to gain official recognition in France, Italy, the United States and South America, is a three-page typewritten document. I quote from photographs of these pages.

"Dail Eireann, Dublin. Report of the department of foreign affairs."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

"The work of the department of foreign affairs does not consist in any way in presenting in a detailed report."

The following is, however, a brief summary of the most important of its activities since the last session, and any further information which members may desire would be given."

The Gillette Safety Razor

Needs no Vacation!

No man can work at his best, day after day the year through. He needs his vacation.

But his Gillette Safety Razor needs no rest—NO STROPPING—NO HONING. The same Gillette gives a perfect shave every day in five minutes.

Slip in a new wafer-thin blade when necessary. $5.00 the set. Choose yours today!

A REAL RECONCILIATION AND FINAL SETTLEMENT OF THE IRISH QUESTION RESTS WITH IRISH THEMSELVES

"The British Nation, Having Come Through the Slaughter of Armageddon, Are Certainly Not Going to be Scared by the Squalid Scenes of Sporadic Warfare Which Are Being Enacted Across the Irish Channel—They May be Irritated, and Ultimately Infuriated, But They Will Certainly Not be Terrorized by Such Proceedings."

(By Rt. Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill, M.P., in The London Illustrated Herald.)

It is certainly a very curious thing that the one country in the British Empire which has been most completely shielded from the sufferings and the losses of the war should be the most discontented and rebellious. Ireland was protected from danger or invasion during that fearful struggle by the sacrifices and exertions of the British Empire. No conscription Act called her manhood to the front. Ireland was the only part of the British Empire where a whole generation has not been mutilated or swept away. The fine courage so often displayed by the Irish troops and the brilliant martial exploits of the Irish divisions, both for main South and the North of Ireland, have been a source of pride to the British Empire. The blood tax which has fallen upon England, Scotland and Wales, and upon the rest of the Empire, indeed, it may well be that one of the contributory causes of the present lamentable situation in Ireland is the fact that the British Empire has been so completely shielded from the sufferings and the losses of the war.

Speaking to a Cross-Atlantic representative, Judge Brodeur expressed his gratification as a Canadian, at finding compatriots occupying such high positions in the political life of the country, and in the fact that Hamar Greenwood, who is an old friend of his own.

He was optimistic about the future of the League of Nations, stating his belief that a cordy operation, however the Japanese Government losing $20,000,000 last year in supplying India rice to the Japanese people at a moderate price.

A solution to which the Government is turning its attention is that of inducing the people to eat less rice and more wheat because of the enormous output of Manchuria is handled by the South Manchuria Railway, which at the same time transports yearly some 300,000 Chinese coolies from Shantung Province to Manchuria, where they labor in the rice lands of the northern provinces of Siberia, in the great belt extending south from Irkutsk and Omsk, is a wonderful grain field, if regularly cultivated, capable of helping in the solution of the world food problem.

"The great grain centre of Winnipeg, Canada," said a leading Japanese business man to the correspondent, "is fair to be rivaled one day in world importance by the city of Harbin, on the border of Manchuria and Eastern Siberia. Harbin is admirably situated to handle the grain arteries of the Far East and I predict a great commercial future for that city."

Manager Pat Moran of the World Champion Chinaman Reds is not an enthusiastic about his pitching staff this far.

"My pitchers have not been in form recently," moaned Pat. "One Sunday game by Slim Salles and another by Dutch Reuther, both southpaws, were the two really well-handled games we have had turned in Jimmy Ring, on Brooklyn right-hander, pitched a good game against the Phillies here, but lost an extra innings to Eppa Rixey. When they had the stuff the pitchers were wild and gave bases on balls that got them into trouble and offset their previous good work. When the hurlers strike their stride we expect to keep along out in front, and with a reasonable degree of luck should come through with all that the Cincinnati fans expect."

It may be that the abolishment of the shine ball, which was a special asset of Hod Eller, Reuther and other broader in these respects we will help you put down the murder campaign and thereafter we will undertake the responsibility of governing the country." The British Parliament would then be forced to meet them at once in the most earnest consultation, and no one can believe that minor difficulties would be allowed to obstruct a practical settlement.

There are only two things which the British nation can never grant to any Irish appeal, violent or conciliatory. We can never concede to Irishmen the means of setting up an independent republic. Nor can we ever compel Ulster by force of arms to participate in a Dublin parliament. On both these issues the British nation must stand and fight—over ten years, over twenty years, over a hundred years. The British nation has the right to demand that the British Empire should be a united and indivisible whole. The British nation has the right to demand that the British Empire should be a united and indivisible whole. The British nation has the right to demand that the British Empire should be a united and indivisible whole.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world. Irish politics are merely impoverished, and British politics greatly simplified by this abstention.

Sinn Féin, "Ourselves Alone," is but the cry of an obnoxious tribalism, while the great world civilization strides on, after the interruption of the war, to an ever-growing and inevitable interdependence.

A real reconciliation with the Irish people, a final settlement of the age-long series of misunderstandings and reproaches, would be an advantage for the world. Irish politics are merely impoverished, and British politics greatly simplified by this abstention.

The ordinary Englishman in Scotland does not want to be bothered about Ireland or anything else. He wants to build his house, to cultivate his garden, to resume his family life, to reorganize his business, to get some pleasure. But while engaged in these modest pursuits, he has not forgotten that he is a subject of the British Empire, and that the British Empire is a united and indivisible whole.

Meanwhile, no course is open to the Government, but to take every possible measure to break the murder campaign and to enforce the authority of the law, while at the same time pressing forward the Home Rule bill.

This dual policy will continually confront Irishmen with the fact that along the path of violence there will be found nothing but increasing resistances by superior power, and that all the time another path is open by which they may constitutionally, personally and speedily obtain the effective self-government of their country. On the one hand, nothing but barred wire and unscalable walls; on the other, an open door—that is the picture which by every act of policy we should endeavor to imprint upon the Irish imagination.

But we are told that this present bill is not sufficiently extensive, it does not give this or that, it falls short in certain important particulars of the Act of 1914. If that were all the complaint, there would be a very easy remedy.

Let any reputable, responsible body of Irishmen, backed by strong elements among their fellow-countrymen, come forward and say, "If the bill is the measure and with sincerity by a

JONES SHIPPING ACT IS QUITE A PROBLEM

Believed Now That Government Will Not be Ready on September 3, Day Set for it to Go Into Effect.

Washington, Aug. 11.—(By Canadian Press.)—The Jones Shipping Act is turning out to be more of a problem for the Government of the United States. The task of studying the more than a score of commercial treaties under the recently enacted act, has been found so formidable by the U. S. State Department that the belief has been expressed that it would be impossible to complete the work by Sept. 3rd, the expiration of the ninety-day period permitted by the act.

In addition to ascertaining the extent to which existing treaties must be amended in order to conform to the new act, the State Department will find it necessary to enter into more or less extensive correspondence with the foreign governments with a view to developing their views and learning what they are willing to make the changes desired. This will be a time-consuming task, as much of the treaty-making must be done by mail, involving many weeks for each exchange of notes. It is, therefore, possible that the act will not be ready for operation by the time it is due to go into effect.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Even the Parliamentary arena, in which Irishmen were wont to display their exceptional gifts of debate and of manoeuvre, is empty. No longer do Irish statesmen hold or strive to hold the balance between British parties, securing from each in turn advantages for their country and raising its name and influence continually in the world.

Certainly Not

"Was it a quiet wedding?" "Of course. You didn't expect they would quarrel before the ceremony, did you?"

Weeds For Brides. "The bride's dress of silk, apricot georgette harmonized charmingly with her hat of brown velvet set off with a bunch of cigarettes at one side."

Hairs Will Vanish After This Treatment

(Toilet Helps) You can keep your arms, neck or face free from hair or fuzz by the occasional use of plain delectable and in using it you need have no fear of marling or injuring the skin. A thick paste is made by mixing some of the powdered delectable with water. Then spread on the hairs after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and all traces of hair have vanished. Be careful, however, to get real delectable.

TENDER GUMS — A WARNING

Beware of gum tenderness that warns of Pyorrhea. Four out of five people over forty have Pyorrhea—many under forty also. Loosening teeth indicate Pyorrhea. Bleeding gums, too. Remember—these inflamed, bleeding gums act as so many doorways for disease germs to enter the system—infecting the joints or tonsils—causing other ailments.

Pyorrhea's positively prevents Pyorrhea, if used in time and used correctly. As it hardens the gums the teeth become firmer.

Brush your teeth with Forhan's. It cleans the teeth thoroughly—keeps them white and clean.

If gum-shrinkage has already set in, start using Forhan's and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

See and 60c tubes in Canada and U.S. If your druggist cannot supply you, send price to us direct and we will mail tube postpaid.

FORHAN'S, LTD., Montreal

FORHAN'S

FOR THE GUMS

The Ionic that Builds You Up

Don't think of OLIVEINE EMULSION solely as a medicine for Heavy Colds, and Deep-seated Coughs. It is more than this. It is the best tonic you can take to purify the blood, give you an appetite, improve the digestion, make flesh, and renew your vigor and vitality.