terminated. The sailors were Stephen Sinnott and John Young, of the steamer Lake Ontario, at Sand Point. The men had been drinking and were returning to the west side when the officer came across them. When Crawford ordered them to move along they showed no inclination to observe the request and he took hold of Sinnott. According to the policeman's story Young then sprang at and struck him, when he (Crawford) retaliated with his baton, which he used with effect on the heads of the sailors, one of whom the policeman alleges attempted to use a knife.
