

ATTENTION

Gateway

staff

REMEMBER

our annual year-end

"BUSINESS"

meeting

is tomorrow nite

at 7-30 pm P.M.

Rm. 282 SUB

Numerology

RE: What's in a name (Sybil Leek). I followed the numerology tables given and came up with the following Personal Number 2. The details for 2, given in the article are quoted below (emphasis added):

2. A KIND, TACTFUL, SYMPATHETIC person, etc. The Name? Adolf Hitler. D.P.M. Rao
Chemistry

Interdit

RE: Maureen Forbes' article on "Interdit au public". Credits should be given where deserved and the intention of this letter is exactly such. In her overwhelming review of "Interdit au public" (March 28), Maureen Forbes gave me all the credits for wardrobe designing. Although I have been active all of this year as wardrobe mistress at Le Theatre Francais and worked on producing some of the costumes worn in our current production, I have not signed any of them. But Miss Forbes may have been misled by credits not so well defined in our program and it should therefore be noted that the period costumes were designed and done mostly by Rolande Girouard; coordination for modern wardrobe by France Levasseur. May I add that when it comes to costume designing, Rolande is at her best and Maureen may well appreciate her work in our forthcoming children's play and Racine's "Britannicus" scheduled in May.

Your's sincerely,
Micheline Duciaume

UAB referendum

As you'll probably read elsewhere in the hallowed pages of this newspaper, the UAB referendum passed with flying colors on Friday last (75.8% YES; 24.2% NO). Maybe it was the well-planned flurry of letters Gateway received for Thursday's paper. Maybe the students really wanted it. Who knows?

I know one thing - the slackasses who regularly vote down SU fee increases of 2 or 3 dollars the the same slackasses who didn't want $15 of their money going into a "jock-fund" and didn't vote last Friday - had better keep their gargantuan precipices shut for the next year or two.

...And while I'm at it, maybe the UAB is listening. The majority voted for your "well-propagandacized" campaign fellas, and the majority aren't all intercollegiate team members. See what I'm getting at? -the intramural budget. The intercollegiate sports budget is already 4 times as high as it's intramural counterpart. I don't think the students voted to see that disparity widened. They obviously want better facilities for themselves too!

I'm prejudiced, of course - on the side of intramural hockey. The last time I played, my helmet strap was a piece of irritating nylon cord; my pants had more holes than material; my elbow pads couldn't have been used to stop a badminton birdie; and I had to beat the moths out of my sweater and socks.

Yes, we gave you a vote of confidence on Friday, UAB - even though you didn't REALLY state what you were going to do with it. Most will probably go to increase the intercollegiate sports budget, regardless of what you "said". I'll be around next year, watching your budgets, playing intramural hockey. Try to keep a "little" of your "promise". OK?

B. Carl Kuhnke

McGhie

RE: Praise and Platitude at Changeover, Thursday, March 28.

Who the hell does Joe McGhie think he is anyway, Richard Nixon?

Douglas Halberg
Gameau

NAIT

RE: NAIT by Yuri Podnor, Letters, March 21, 1974.

It really seems a shame that a student of one system must criticize another to rationalize the credibility of his own education or the lack thereof. Can you tell if the egg is good by looking at the shell? I suppose U of A students are educated to such super human levels and that Yuri is here to prove it.

I agree that NAIT students are extremely proficient within their own technologies, much the same as your doctors, lawyers, and indian chiefs are. But I somehow doubt that because university students are supposedly exposed to a more mature level of awareness whether they will be more of an asset to society. I doubt if our proficiency will be a detriment to society or can Yuri provide facts to the opposite?

To the extent that some U of A students are exposed to a mature level of awareness is exemplified by Yuri Podnor in that he lacks sufficient personal security to stand alone before society but must attempt to relegate others to a position lower than himself.

In summation may I suggest that Yuri and those that follow him in his exercise in tunnel vision remove the left foot from between their jaws before implanting the right.

Patrick LaForge,
Vice-President N.A.I.T.S.A.

A diversion

I found something beautiful last week that other people might like to read. It's a letter from a friend of our family who's a missionary in India. He's the headmaster of a school located in a northern province in the Himalayas. Maybe his words will take people's minds off exams and papers for a moment and set them to thinking about something else.

Peter Best

Dear Friends:

I've booted it. No letter in January. Apologies. My life. Just now I thought I had a