

stomach, and there become sour, with the frequent belching up of acrid or bitter water and gas—where the bowels are inflated, frequently costive and troubled with colic pains—the tongue coated, and the whole system weak and languid, the ELIXIR will give quick and permanent relief, and if continued for a sufficient length of time, will certainly cure. The trouble here is in the glands of the stomach, the Liver and the Spleen, and this ELIXIR is especially adapted to their disorders.

CACOUNA, P.Q. Aug. 8, 1876.

This is to certify that I was taken with the dyspepsia colic last March, and for a period of eight months was one of the most miserable creatures you could see in a day's walk, not being able to eat, drink or sleep with any comfort. I was nearly deprived of my reason, and hope had entirely left me, as all the efforts made for my recovery proved fruitless. By the first of May last I had become so weak and feeble that I could scarcely stand alone, and to all appearances would soon die. About this time I made preparations to visit this place with a friend to take care of me, and on my arrival in June was induced to try DR. WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR. I have taken but two bottles, and am now enjoying as good health as any one. I have no doubt that it was this ELIXIR alone, under divine Providence, that effected this wonderful cure.

E. D. HARRIS.

HARVEY, N.B., Sept. 22, 1875.

I feel myself a thousand times obliged to you. I have for some years been afflicted with Dyspepsia in its most aggravated form, and from the good effects already produced by WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR in my case, I am persuaded that the use of it will effect a thorough cure. I therefore wish you to send me another bottle, which I think will be sufficient. Send by the bearer of this letter.

J. D. HOVEY.

MILTON, N.S., March 2, 1876.

I think it due to the public that I should make a statement respecting myself, and the great benefit I have derived from the use of WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR. I have been dyspeptic since 1868. My disease is subject to aggravations of the most distressing kind, and during part of this long period, I have been under the care of several eminent physicians of this place and also in large cities, and have taken from them a good deal of medicine, for which I have likewise paid large sums of money, and all without benefit. I had, too, tried, with less expense but no profit, many of the remedies I saw advertised in the papers for my disease. Some time during last spring or forepart of summer, upon my return from a sea voyage to which my severe afflictions had driven me (but like everything else hitherto tried without benefit), I found a friend who had been taking this ELIXIR for a short time, and with great benefit. He saw me moping about half bent with pain and vomitings; with a fellow sympathy he noticed my condition, and asked me some questions, and then recommended to me this ELIXIR, saying with confidence it was a remedy that would cure me.

I was very gloomy and depressed in spirits, and having spent nearly my whole living in trying to recover my health without doing it, was very incredulous in believing his hopes; but I got a bottle, determined it should be the last. These remarks are a hasty outline of my condition, which in its details are very much like many other of the worst forms of dyspepsia. The rest of my story is soon told. I took WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR to the number of nearly three bottles, and am now well, I mean in perfect health, and what ELIXIR remains is set by as unrequired. I have more call for beef than medicine.

And now let me say, no person who has not recovered his health under similar circumstances can have any idea of the grateful sense of obligation I feel towards those concerned (particularly my friend who recommended it to me) in the circumstances of my restoration to health, the world, and business.

W. K. SCOTT.

In Jaundice and Liver Complaint, where there is a dull, heavy aching in the side, and at the pit of the stomach, a more or less yellow or greenish tinge of the skin and whites of the eyes, where the stools are clay colored, the urine almost black, the head aching or feeling dull and stupid, this Elixir is the best remedy. These diseases, that is—Dyspepsia, Jaundice, and Liver Complaint—are apt to be most troublesome in spring and early summer, and should be prevented by an early resort to the Tonic and Sarsaparillian Elixir, before the symptoms begin to exhibit themselves, in conformity to the time-honored maxim, "That in the Spring is the time to purify the Blood."

ST. JOHN, Sept. 4, 1877.

I think I am only doing my duty when I testify to the great benefit I have received from WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR in curing me. In 1871, while out West, I had a very severe bilious