asked effect to be given to, any personal wish-es of her own. The first thing to be done-and more than probably when that is done it will be found that all has been done—is to ascertain whether the course taken by Mr. Disraeli is his own or her Majesty's. He has given his narrative, or rather his several and varying narratives, with elaborate vagueness, but the general aim and effect, beyond all doubt, was and is to produce the impression that, in some sense and degree, he had subordinated his own wishes to her Majesty's, and that, in the course he is pursuing, he is acting upon the personal wishes, and therefore has had delegated to him some of the official powers, of toyalty. That is the im-pression produced, and designed to be produc-We believe it to be a false impression.

But it is necessary that its falsity should be made plain beyond all question. Is the Crown orcing a policy or line of procedure upon Mr. Mr. Disraeli ascribing his own emes to the Crown ? This would be a very weighty question under any circumstances-it interpose its personal wishes even for reasonable or unquestionable purposes ; it would be a great question whether the Minister ought to be penitted to announce and make use of such an act by the Crown; it would be a very interesting subject of consideration what ought to be done should it be found that the Minister had, by whatever accident, ascribed to the Crown words and acts of which the Crown was innocent. But in this case there is an additional reason for investigation and discussion. The course taken

What was done in the ginning, but more is required. Put to the ques-tion, nothing intelligible could be extorted from to six months' imprisonment in the Penitentiary Mr. Disraeli as to what really passed between her Majesty and him, of which he and his collesgues at the same times, and he himself at bell's building and larceny, received six months different times have given irreconcilable ac- in the Common Jail.
