The Situation.

Heavier artillery than that possessed by the Allies still continues to tell burners and Woodens. In 1797 the a large part of the story with regard to first white child was bon in what is both the German and the Austrian now Burford-Stephen Landon. The operations. As an offset to this setback there comes the news that the tri-color again floats over Fort Douaumont This point has been in possession of the enemy for many weeks. At Dead Man's Hill and Hill 304 the sanguinary struggle still continues and the Germans are said to have thrown sixty thousand fresh men into the con-

The Austrians seem to be progress ing on the Trentino front and they make large claims as to the capture of prisoners and war material. It is said however, that the Italians now hold very strong positions and that any further advance of the foe would seem to be impossible.

The Turkish army has commence to retreat towards Bagdad. They have evidently decided to concentrate in order the better to give battle to the advancing Russians and British.

The Ross Rifle.

It has always been the case of more or less conflicting testimony with reference to Canada's arm-the Ross "rifle. Its superiority for target use has been freely conceded, but the claim has been made that in rough and tumble war work, it does not come up to some others. The main complaint has been made with reference to jam. ming, but Sir Robert Borden, during a recent speech in the House on the subject, showed that this was a fault not confined to the Ross weapon alone. In this regard, he said:-

"The only difficulty with the Ross rifle that I ever heard of up to the time I went to Great Britain last year was with regard to jamming; as fa as I can remember, I did not hear of any other difficulty. That jamming was not confined to the Ross rifle; it occurred in a very great measure-ir almost equal measure, I think-with the Lee-Enfield rifle, and if we had taken away from our men the Ross rifle and armed them with Lee-Enfields the jamming would still have occurred if the same ammunition had

"When it was discovered that the was thought desirable to enlarge the of the Ross rifle. It was thought desirable by the British government, as I am informed, to enlarge the chamber of the Lee-Enfield. This course was taken with regard to each rifle for precisely the same reason. I do not affirm that there was the same amount of jamming in the Lee-Enfield as in the Ross—I do not know about that: I have heard contradicting statements with regard to it. The Minister of Militia directed that the enlargement made in the chamber of the Ross rifle should make that chamber slightly larger than the chamber of the Lee-Enfield, in order that we Church conducted devotional services. might be on the safe side. And I am informed that the Ross rifles were all and introduction of new officers then called in and the alteration in the chamber was made, and in the new

Burford's New Building.

The residents of Burford naturally take a great deal of pride in their new post office building, which was yesterday finally declared open for business. It is a structure fully worthy of that pretty and well kept place, which most observers believe will develop in the future to much

The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, Rev. D. A. Armstrong; Vice-President, Rev. J. C. Nicholson; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Roy Schuyler; Elementary Department, Miss J. Dalziel; A.B.C. Department, Mrs. W. Kinney; Teachers' Training Dept., Mr. D. Patton; Missionary Dept., Miss N. James; Temperance, Mrs. A. Howell.
