A ROYAL SIX NATIONS CHIEF.

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught made no secret of the keen delight with which he sat as a chief at a Council of the Six Nations Indians.

After the continued, and without doubt, often weary round, of more or less formal and set receptions, the picturesque setting and the novel attributes of Saturday's proceedings in the Ohsweken Council House, must have provided a welcome contrast.

Miss E. Pauline Johnson is right when she says that the Duke is the only white chief of the Nation. He alone can sit with his brother chiefs in council, and other gentlemen who have been given chieftainships have only obtained the honorary brand.

The entire event was symbolical of the tact and consideration which members of the Royal Family have always shown the world over to allies, no matter of what color. A consideration which manifests a full recognition of the fact that they and their duties represent a diversified blending of many races who are proud to call the Union Jack their own flag.

THAT BANQUET. That Conservative principles still continue to flourish and grow in Brantford and Brant County was abundantly proved at the banquet on Friday night.

It is only one party in the local constituency which could begin to attain such a magnificent demonstration. To carry one out with such marked success.

The committee have reason to pride themselves upon securing two such efficient outside orators as Hon. Dr. Roche and Hon. Mr. Lucas. The Liberals used to make the silly taunt that the Conservatives did not possess men capable of efficient public office. As a matter of fact they are plentiful and are demonstrating that fact on every occasion.

Hon. Dr. Roche represents a western constituency which he carried last general election by a majority of 1026. He is a most fluent orator with an exceptional ease of manner and his points are put with cogency and force.

Hon. Mr. Lucas represents Centre Grey in the Ontario House and when he first started to run it was a Liberal constituency. Last fight he got there by the comfortable majority of 1172.

He also is an orator of exceptional merit and his peroration of Friday night will long be remembered.

As for the members of the Four Brants, well, they always, do well, and their constituents are rightly proud of them.

Royal Mohawk Chief.

Your brother chiefs also beg to inform Your Royal Highness that they and their people are now a self-maintaining people, and that they owe their present condition to civilization and education which have made them to a great extent prosperous and independent agriculturists, professional and business men in their land of heritage.

They would most respectfully request that Your Royal Highness will convey to His Majesty King George V. (War Chief Onontiyoh), our most profound and sincere greetings, and that He may be long spared to rule the vast British Empire and all its Empire Colonies.

Your brother chiefs desire to assure Your Royal Highness that they heard with the deepest feeling of sorrow that Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Connaught was ill and that they greatly sympathize with you in your affliction and are reminded that "all are alike high and low, subject to the changes and chances of this mortal life."

Your brother chiefs invoke the Great Spirit that He may be pleased to restore her speedily to perfect health, and that He may keep and preserve you and your royal household for many winters to come.

In conclusion your brother chiefs desire to express their grateful feelings of joy and triumph in their history. Never before have they been so highly honored by royalty, as this day in the fact that a Prince of the greatest Empire under the heavens condescends to sit with them in the most ancient parliament on this continent as a brother chief of the Six Nations.

Signed on behalf of the Six Nations Council: Chief J. W. M. Elliott, Chief A. G. Smith, Chief Jacob S. Johnson, Chief Josiah Hill. The Duke's Reply.

His Royal Highness in rising to reply was cheered again and again. In a slow and most deliberate manner with charming voice and most delightful diction he read the following address:

Brother Chiefs of the Six Nations Indians: I am indeed happy, as one of the Senior Chiefs of the Six Nations Indians, to sit once more in our council chamber where I sat with your fathers 43 years ago, and I join in your thanks to the Great Spirit that I am spared to visit you again after so many years, and to join hands with the successors of the chiefs who sat in Council with me in the old days.

I am happy to know, from what you told me last winter, that there are still among you some who remember my former visit.

The Six Nations have always been the steadfast allies of the British Crown. When war was the prevailing condition your people shed their blood and gave their lives for our mutual protection. Now that war has mercifully been a stranger to Canada for 100 years, and our attention is wholly devoted to the practice of peaceful industries and occupations, you have shown that you are equally ready to give your energy and attention to those pursuits for the lasting benefit of your people.

Not only have your people progressed in the development of agriculture, but your name has also become famous in the world of literature.

When I was in Vancouver last summer I paid a visit to your celebrated poetess, Miss Pauline Johnson, whose father I knew, and for a time enjoyed the society of that famous lady, who, though her body is torn with pain, retains all her mental brilliancy.

Miss Johnson, by her sympathetic and graceful verses, has been able to hand down to future generations something of the romance and of the picturesque side of the old life and the tradition of her Indian brothers, and has depicted it with a touch equalled by no other poet.

You ask me to interest myself on your behalf regarding your treaty with the British Government, and I can assure you that I will take the matter up with my Government, and will look into it most closely, with I trust, results satisfactory to yourselves.

I thank my brother chiefs and the people of the Six Nations Indians for their kindly reference to the Duchess' illness, and I can assure them that it is a matter of the greatest regret to her that she cannot be with me among you to-day. I shall have great pleasure in informing His Majesty George of your message of loyalty and of good wishes, and in conclusion desire to say that my prayer is that the Great Spirit may watch over and guard the people of the Six Nations, and give them happy and contented lives.

ARTHUR KA-RAH-KON-TYE.

The Duke always signs his name "Arthur" so that it was a most graceful compliment on his part to attach his Indian name to his reply. And he pronounced it too with the true guttural Iroquois accent. All of which goes to show that like his late lamented brother, King Edward, and his nephew, the present King he is a diplomat of the highest order.

The address presented by the chiefs is inscribed on buckskin ornamented by the totems of the Six Nations and is a very fine bit of work art reflects great credit on Chief Williams Loft, who was responsible for the inscription and penmanship. His Royal Highness very considerably expressed a wish that the address should be placed on exhibition in Ohsweken and Brantford for a few days before being expressed to him at Ottawa and this will of course be done.

Then followed more addresses. A lengthy one from the Six Nations Agricultural Society. Another from the chiefs of the Mississaugas of the Credit still one more from the Warriors and Women and yet again from the school children of the Reserve. The latter was read by Irene Smith, the pretty granddaughter of Chief A. G. Smith. Accompanying it was a beautiful bouquet of roses and the Duke was manifestly pleased with this graceful little tribute.

Presented with Sash. One of the most interesting features of the whole procedure was the investiture of the Prince with a sash emblematic of chieftainship. In 1869, His Royal Highness was accorded this honor, but the Indians decided to mark his second visit amongst them by again according him this tribute.

The Duke, on returning to the city, had quite a narrow escape from being mixed up in an accident on crossing the Cocksbutt bridge. A wagon loaded with baled hay was met. As the Duke's motor passed this wagon, three or four of the bales of hay, weighing one hundred pounds or so apiece, fell off the wagon onto the motor. Fortunately, the covers were up, and the Royal party, besides the inconvenience of having to wait for a minute or so to have the hay removed, suffered no hindrance. But it might easily have been a nasty contingency.

Notes. The portrait of His Royal Highness as a young man, and also those of Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort ornament the walls of the Council House. They were the gift of the Duke when he was first made a Chief. On Saturday he was much interested in these portraits, and informed Superintendent Gordon Smith that he would see that the Chiefs received a later portrait of himself.

Mr. John Buskard, official Court reporter, was engaged by the chiefs to take a full stenographic report of the proceedings. This will be placed on record with the other interesting archives of the Six Nations—the mother of Parliaments on the continent of America.

Col. Lowther was very much interested in hearing that the chiefs were elected in a hereditary manner through the woman side of the house. "Sort of a little House of Lords," said the Colonel to the writer; "and they seem to be having their troubles too." This latter remark was called forth by the statement of Chief Smith that an unsuccessful effort had been made to make the office of chief elective instead of by hereditary succession.

Visits Mohawk Church

On the return to the city to catch the 2.30 train on the T. H. and B. for Toronto, His Royal Highness was driven around by the Mohawk Church, in front of which, 43 years ago, he was made an Indian Chief. He was received by the Rector, the Rev. R. Ashton and the girls of the Mohawk Institute, who under the leadership of Miss Hardy, sang the National Anthem and O Canada. The Duke again signed the famous Queen Anne bible with his name of 'Arthur.' Forty-three years ago he signed it just below that of "Albert Edward," the late lamented King, his brother.

Sharp on time, the Royal party reached the T. H. and B. station cars. A large crowd heartily cheered the Duke on his departure.

There was not a hitch in the arrangements from first to last, and Major Gordon Smith, the Superintendent, and the Indian Chiefs are alike to be congratulated on the completeness of the details, and the thorough manner in which they were carried out.

He Was Pleased. There can be no question at all that the Duke thoroughly enjoyed the trip. Through his military secretary, Col. Lowther, he expressed his entire approbation of the arrangements made throughout. In reference to the addresses presented to him by the Agricultural Society and the Mississaugas, he gave instructions that he would send written replies. These addresses were quite unexpected and had not been provided for, and the Duke to the Duke to Miss Pauline Johnson, in reply to the addresses of the Six Nations Chief, will strike a most sympathetic note in the hearts of all Brantfordites.

From a literary standpoint, it places her upon a pedestal unique in Canadian annals. That she well deserves such a royal recognition goes without saying, from the standpoint of her former townspeople. If that were possible, the Duke honored himself by honoring, to use his own words, a "famous lady."

A Physical Wreck

Suffered Tortures from Nervousness. Miss Marguerite Lees, 91 Robert St., Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was a wreck, reduced in body, and despondent. I suffered tortures from nervousness, and was totally unfitted for work. A friend recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla. I commenced taking it and by the time the second bottle was consumed I knew that I was mending. Gradually I grew well. I have used Hood's since. I would not be without it on any account, and do most enthusiastically endorse every word in its favor."

Doughnuts!

Rich and brown — light and tempting — that's the way doughnuts come from dough of Rainbow Flour.

Each taste demands another. After you've eaten the first one, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't drag you from the second.

What makes the nutlike zest? Mother's knowledge and Rainbow Flour.

It's not so surprising that the best flour should make the best doughnuts—is it? So just remember to specify "Rainbow" when you want flour.

In using Rainbow Flour for pastry, more water (added slowly) is required and less flour.
