The Spirit of Worship

Those who remember the eighth day of October of this year, will remark of it as being an ideal autumn day. Taking advantage of the fair weather to build a foundation for a shelter at my prospective island home (in the company of a fellow workman), I took passage in a row-boat across the western waters of Ontario's prettiest lake; and though tired from the labor of previous days, I became deeply, though favorably impressed with the spirit of worship, due largely to the beautiful and varied scenes that opened to our view, as we slowly wended our way in the direction of the White Hills.

I had been across these waters many times before; both in storm and sunshine, alone and in company, rowing and in the tow of motor craft, but on no previous occasion did the thought of reverence and worship so fasten itself to my mind. The sun was shining as brightly as ever I saw it shine. The air was cool and bracing. The wind was blowing steadily, but softly, from the southwest. The lofty, blue encircled mountain peak to the south, seemed to smile as it stood out in bold relief on the horizon; did ever so bright a sky look down into so enchanting a lake.

But lest one becomes overjoyful in the presence of such marvellous beauty, a tinge of sadness comes to us. Why! Looking shoreward, we notice that the singing birds are congregating for departure to a warmer climate. The leaves of the forest, once a modest green, though not yet fallen, have changed to red brown and yellow, a sure indication of the retreating fear, dead nature laid out in state.

Inspiration is a divine gift, and comes to the mind through various avenues and circumstances. To the thoughtful, well balanced mind, the mind imbued with high ideals and a definite purpose, always has "that" within him, or given him from time to time, which enables him to not only recognize the source of his inspiration but to graciously acknowledge it; in other words, he realizes that the fountain head lies beyond the finite, and concludes that it must be in the realm of the Infinite; therefore he humbly bows before the Creator, the divine, satisfied that He and He alone, is the giver of all good and perfect gifts, too wise to err and too good to be unkind.

These fine thoughts, these contrite feelings, this deeper conception, this heavenly attuning of the mind, either escape, or at least have no effect upon the ordinary, or average, 20th century mind for various reasons; chief of which is indifference.

The mind is a divinely strung instrument, of marvellous capabilities, but if we neglect to keep it properly attuned, open and receptive, it soon becomes dulled to the finer senses, content to feed upon and associate with the lower or worldly environments; the sure course of the unregenerated nature.

The spirit of worship and the sustaining influences of Divine, are the exalted privilege of every man, regardless of the number of talents that he may possess; but if he allows his mind to become occupied and satisfied with the material, the things that perish, he never can hope to rise into that nobler and better sphere of usefulness and devotion designed by the great author of his being.

Sooner or later we must all pass the way of the autumn leaf, the retreating year, through the agonies of dissolution. Let us then act wisely, ever alert to catch the finer sounds, the sweeter melodies of Divine tuition; so that we shall, not only come to the full enjoyment of the life that now is, but also that which is to come, forever associated with Him that sitteth on the throne.

BODY OF AGED MAN FOUND IN A WOODS NEAR CHARLESTON

John Spence, 82, Had Wandered From Home.

LAST SEEN SEPTEMBER 29

In His Enfeebled Condition He Was Unable to Withstand Nights in the Open.

After he had been ten days missing from his home near Charleston, the dead body of John Spence, aged 82, a retired farmer, was found Sunday by searchers in a wood near Sheatown, two and a half miles east of Charleston. Dr. J. F. Harte, of Athens, who was summoned, decided that an inquest was unnecessary and the funeral was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The late Mr. Spence was a man well known in Charleston and vicinity. On Sept. 29 he left home and when he did not return a searching party was organized. Their efforts proved unavailing until yesterday when James Keyes and David Spence, of Charleston, found the old man's body in a wood belonging to Joseph Morris, located near Sheatown. He had evidently wandered from his home and in his enfeebled condition was unable to withstand the nights in the open. The body was somewhat decomposed.

Dr. J. F. Harte, Athens, was summoned and after making an investigation decided that an inquest was not necessary, death having very evidently been due to natural causes.

The deceased spent almost his entire life in the vicinity of Charleston. Surviving are four sons and two daughters, Thomas, Charleston; Samuel, Sheatown; Robert, Brockville; William, Dobbs' Settlement; Mrs. Allan Kavanagh, Sheatown, and Mrs. Davison, Sheatown.

Catarrah Cannot Be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrah is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrah Medicine is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrah Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in the country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrah Medicine is what produces such wonderful results in catarrah conditions. Send for testimonials, free.

Paint Protection vs. DECAY

Any surface that is covered with Glidden Endurance Paint is well covered and will not decay easily, for Glidden protection is good protection and saves the cost of frequent repairs.

Glidden Endurance Paint prevents decay, keeps out moisture from the wood and resists wear from changing weather conditions without scaling or cracking.

Glidden Endurance Paint stays fresh and bright for a long time, wears well and looks well—and because of its durability is the cheapest paint you can buy.

For everything about the home or farm that needs to be painted, stained, enameled, varnished or finished in any way, there is a Glidden product made especially for that purpose.

We have them. Color cards free.
