THE PANSY PRINCESS.

Purple and gold as sunset of the north,
Thou pansy, tell what thought lies hid in thee;
Dost thou dream upon a time when knights went forth
The pomp and splendor of thy court to see?

In training robes of satin and brocade,
Didst reign a queen o'er nations wild and vast,
Till ruthless time decreed their suns should fade,
Their glories be but ashes of the past?

Close to thy side, all fierce in black and gold,
A panther warrior guards thee still with care;
Dost thou recall a day when, overbold,
He wooed thee with the sunlight on his hair?

And near in shadow, pale as some sweet saint,
A snow-white pansy opens to the day—
A pious nun with pallid lips and faint,
Who bows her head the while she seems to pray.

For thee, O pagan princess of the dawn,
For thee, O warrior knight of valiant deeds,
The pale nun prays, with downcast face and wan,
While through her fingers slip the silent beads.

And is it true that all the prayers and love,
And all the wealth and worldliness of powers,
When centuries have come and gone, will prove
Mere memories in thoughtful pansy flowers?

Provincial Detective Rogers Commends the Circus Management on Their Strict Integrity.

Government Detective Joseph Rogers accompanied Ringling Bros. circus through Canada, and left the show when it returned to the United States last evening.

Mr. Rogers stated while in the city that this circus was the best behaved that ever passed through Canada. The owners will put up with no thieves or rogues, and whenever any are found in the wake of the show, the detective force of Ringling Bros. are just as anxious to capture them as the local organization is the minut that has ever been in Canada. The performances are all pure and free from everything objectionable. We ran up against a bunch of pickpockets, 11 in all, in Ontario, and they were summarily dealt with. Ottawa, Guelph, Stratford, and Barrie were the places in which the thieves were secured.

"There is no show change work, no kickers, no extra money for tickets on the outside. I may say that I was highly delighted to find one show conducted on such creditable principles."

"We didn't get any pickpockets here," concluded Mr. Rogers. "One lady did report having her purse stolen, but I picked it up where she had been standing and had dropped it."
