THE DEPTHS OF LONDON

THINGS THAT FEW OF ITS MYRIAD OF VISITORS KNOW OF.

-Ways of the Vast East End Population-The Great Curse of the East End of London Is Drink-Jews Care For

Their Own Indigent Poor. The shrines of men and places and things known to song and story usually occupy the time and attention of the visitor to Europe, the land and its ancient capital are no exception to the general rule. in London the House of Parliament, that venerable structure erected in honor of St. Peter, Westminster Albey, and that other noble church edifice. St. Paul's Cathedral, the osten ous city homes of the nobility, the atres, clubs, parks, museums, and all such essentials of modern civil..a-tion, each in turn receive their model of praise and adulation; while of praise and adulation; while assembly a stone's throw of these evidences of wealth and prosperily those unlovely appendages of the modern Babylon, South and East London, remain unknown not only to the sightseers but also to the dwellers in the metropolis itself.

The Thieves' Quarter.
Southwark, on the Surrey side set of the Thames, is a neighborhood, as rarely ever visited except Ly the police authorities and a few self-sacrificing people, known as the thieves' quarters. This section, which is south of Guy's Hospital and east of Bermondsey Market, occupies the space within a triangle, the base being Kent street. From this street radiate a number of long lanes and blind alleys. The houses in Kent street, the main thoroughlare, have an exceedingly poverty-stricken appearance, but are palaces in comparison with the rookeries in the offshoots. Eight thousand people are housed in this small space, consist-ing of dock laborers, costermongers and makers of toys and ornaments. and makers of toys and ornaments. The remainder, a large proportion of the whole, are criminals, receivers of stolen goods, trainers of young thieves, false coiners and degraded women. There is scarcely a house in parts of this region of which some of its members have not had troubly with the relies with the police. The Little Ones Suffer. Swarms of children sunk to the lowest depths of degradation and destitution play in the gutters among the filth; children whose parents, either through shame of their rags or through carelessness, will not allow them to attend school. The better class of boys, those wishing to make an honest livelihood, soon leave the place; the others, who cannot be costermongers, become thieves. The moral depravity of the younger generation is so great that the various societies who endeavor to reclaim these youthful criminals report more lapses from boys comng from their district and that of Drury lane than from all other parts of London together. There are, however, not a few honest people in this neighborhood, but more or less fami-liarity exists between them and the criminal class. The same antipathy to the police exists among both, and criminals have often been notified by their honest neighbors of an intend-ed police visit, after which capture s almost impossible. The people are seen, alert and vivacious, and on Sunday, which is market day, more goods are sold than during all the

of the week.
Kindness Ereeds Consideration. Many instances of the most devoted schesacrince are to be met with re, as in other of the city's dark places. The parish physician and his elpmeet, the missionary and disgreatest respect and courtesy, and when on their errands of mercy may go into dark lanes, tumble-down go into dark lanes, tumple-down tenements, filthy rooms, and even into well-known houses of thieves without molestation. A story is told that the parish doctor, while on his way to visit a bad ease of fever, was relieved of his handkerchief by a boy thief lately arrived in the district on his return he was not better the control of the structure of the state of the structure of trict. On his return he was met by the youth, who had in the meantime been informed of the identity of his vir.im, and the handkerchief restore with the apology that he did not loow he was the doctor. The business of flower-selling carried on by the dwellers of this district is often merely a blind to give the would-be vendor an opportunity of picking up things, or of "laying a plant" where the jimmy might be used without too great a risk. None but criminals or their connections are permitted to visit the public houses, shops and lodging-houses of the neighborhood. Strangers Not Wanted. Should a stranger inadvertently enter one of these places, he must retire as soon as possible, or remain at his peril. Far away from the public ken and surrounded only by their own kind, plans can be discussed without danger. Usually all the burglaries and crimes committed are known to the quarter, but the the burglaries and crimes committed are known to the quarter, but the information is never allowed to leak out. Criminals pay enormous rents for the privilege of living together, and the most modern of conveniences and every known luxury are provided for those who can pay. The quarter has a world all its own. Balls and entertainments of all kinds are given, with which the police do not interfere unless something is wrong. Some of the criminals are known to the police authorities, others are not, Some of the criminals are known to the police authorities, others are not, except that it is surmised they are probably like those with whom they are associated. When the quarter of one city becomes too hot for a criminal he flies to another, and there is a fairly safe, unless the crime committed is of an exceptional nature. There are two schools in the district and two churches; the larger of the schools was formerly the residence of the notorious highwayman, Dick Turpla. The congregation of St. Stephen's Chapel on Sunday evening numbers about three hundred gathered by a personal visit of the minister to nearly every house in the neighborhood. The attendance at the Wesleyan Chapel is much smaller.

THE PERSON NAMED IN

Where Labor Is Housed. That beehive of industry of two millions of people, called East two millions of people, caree and London, with little of beauty and nothing of history to commend it, the growth of little over half a cen-tury, its population the poorest of tury, its population the poorest of the poor, is a district known only by name to the residents of other parts of London and never visited by the of London and never visited by the stranger, yet this portion of the metropolis, with its interminable rows of low-fronted houses, earns a large part of the city's wealth; the producers themselves making barely sufficient to keep body and soul together without the assistance of all the members of the family, and for whom life contains so little brightness that to drown for a time the daily misery men and women have daily misery men and women have recourse to drink. The inhabitants of this quarter are Polish Jews, the makers of clothes and furniture, in Shoreditch and Bethnal Green; boot-makers on Mile End road, silk work-ers in Spitalfields and Bethnal Green, dock laborers, factory girls, seam stresses, shop girls, who, Sir Walter Besant says, are sweated by sweaters, who are themselves sweated. The Jewish emigrants appallingly poor, upon their arrival in the city, are received by the Jewish Doard of Guardians, and work is found for them at the lowest possible wage at which life can be sustained. As soon as they learn the ways of the coun-try and something of the language they move, and in turn exploit their newly-arrived co-religionists and Christian neighbors. The Gin Curse.

St. Jude's Caurch on Commercial road, decorated with paintings by Watts, is an oasis in this desert. Toynbee Hall, adjoining, is a memorial to Arnold Toynbee, originator of the University Settlement, in which highly educated young men, by living and working among the people in this region of ignorance and darkness, strive to raise them to a higher plane of living. The great enemy to all progress in South and East London, in fact everywhere among the laboring classes, is drink. This curse is responsible for the majority of crimes, from common as sault to the most brutal murder; for this men sacrifice their manhood, and go down, down, until, brutalized and dead to all human feeling, they live upon the degradation of wives and children; and the women, mothers of the future generation, strive whenever possible to forget the everpresent wretchedness of their existence by visits to the neighboring gin place, the very babes at the breast being stupified by the same soporific which unsexes the mothers. And all this that the rich owners of these leper spots may become richer; that high church dignitaries may live in a more princely style and entertain in a more lavish manner; or that hereditary legislators of ancient lineage may purchase a few more old masters and articles of virtu, adding to their already priceless collection; or some lordling created from among the "noveau riche" may salve his conscience and debauch mind by presenting hospital ships to the nation, building barracks known as "improved flats" or workmen's houses and other so-called charitable

Real Christianity. Real Christianity.

It is among the submerged tenth that brilliant young college men, clergymen born in luxury and bred in Fennement, men who might aspire to the highest position in the gift of the Church, cast aside all hope of the church, cast aside all hope of the church, cast aside all hope of the church who were subject themselves to inpreferment, subject themselves to insult, and even to death from disease, that they may carry to this region of Stygian night the Gospel These humble followers of the lowly Nazarene are everywhere received with reverence, fights and rows are stopped, and mouths which but moment previous gave utterance to oaths are silent until the "parson," as he is called, has passed, perhaps on his way to comfort some poor soul about to enter the valley of the shadow. In this manner these men spend their lives, and when they become known are allowed to enter, freely and unharmed, dens which even the police dare not penetrate unless in force. In this strange quarter of the city, the East End, is to be found George's secondhand book shop, the largest in London, the spe-cialty of which is matching odd volumes, the business being done principally from stalls in the open

Sir William Butler, who entertained the officers of the German fleet at Plymouth recently, is one of many Irishmen who have risen to fame in the ranks of the British army. But his chances in this respect looked slender enough at one time. Those were the days of purchase, and the £1,500 needed to get him his company were hopelessly beyond his resources. So he cabled to Wolseley, then in command of the Red River expedition, "Please remember me," followed the first Canadian boat "on spec." and by the sheerest good luck Irishmen who have risen to fame in expectation, "Please remember me, followed the first Canadian boat "on spec." and by the sheerest good luck obtained the appointment he coveted. Sir William is the author of several books of travel, the best known and most popular of which is "The Great Lone Land," the outcome of a special mission to the Saskatchewan territories of Canada, which he undertook in 1870. In the following year he published "The Wild North Land," in 1875 "Akimfoo," and five years later a book of traveling reminiscences entitled "Far Out: Rovings Retold." His recall from the command at the Cape at the time of the late war, and the subsequent vindication of his action by the evidence given before the War Commission, is recent history, et course.—Westminster Gazette.

The bird very seldom nests near the margin of a field, where it might be put off its nest by passersby. the shores of the North sea skylarks will nest in the "bents" and "marram" close to the edge of the sand hills. though they have to fetch food to their young from a considerable distance. There is always something very pleasing in the sight of a lark's nest. It is usually sunk in a hollow, and, unlike the nests of many ground building birds, is most carefully made, the cup being deep and perfectly circular, and lined with very fine grasses, though the outer part is made of rough, dead bents, and often of a most irregular shape in order to fill up the ho which it is made.-London Spectator.

Night Blossoms.

Many flowers, natives most of them of regions where the day is intensely hot, expand their blossoms at night. Notable among them is the Victoria Regia, which opens its splendid calyx near the Amazon at nightfall and closes it at dawn.

The queen of the night blocms for one night only, and has its home on the islands of the Caribbean sea. The triangular cactus, whose flowers are a foot in length and width, follows the same habit.

From Virginia comes the biennial oenothera, or "night light," which was brought to England in 1614 because its twisted red root could be eaten as noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates wager that ended in a crime. Thomas Holte, one day in 1612, was nunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once; when he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together vith his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into kitchen, selzed a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

Two Missouri Towns. When the presidential struggle beween Clay and Jackson was at its gists. neight it is related that a band of emi grants from Kentucky and the then other western states commenced to set-tle on the north side of the Missouri river and called their county Clay and the county seat Liberty.

At the same time another lot of emigrants from Virginia and other south ern states pitched their tents on the south side of the Big Muddy and called their county Jackson and the capital Independence. And so it remains to day, Clay stood for liberty and and the state of t Jackson for independence.

Pendence. The Daisy. In French the daisy is called la Marguerite. It was the device of Marguerite of Anjou, and also of Marguerite of Valois, a much more appropriate withdrew from the glitter of courts to become a recluse, than of the ambitious Lancastrian queen of England. daisy is the national flower of Italy, chosen in honor of Queen Marguerite In the language of flowers it signifies innocence, peace, hope. In the age of chivalry it was the emblem of fidelity and worn by knights at tournaments in honor of their ladyloves.

Pumice Stone.

Pumice stone is a porous feldspathic scoria from volcanoes. The pores are linear and so fine as often to be barely visible except by means of a magnifying glass. Its specific gravity is 2.2 to 2.4—water being the unit—but by reason of its spongy texture pieces are often buoyant enough to float on water It consists chiefly of silica, with some times 17 per cent of lumina, 6 per cent of soda and 4 per cent of potash. It is of grayish shades of color, passing into yellow and brown. The chief source from which it is obtained for commercial purposes is Campo Bianco, one of the Lipari islands, where it forms a hill nearly 1,000 feet high. In the arts pumice is largely employed, mostly in a pulverized state, as a polishing mate rial for ivory, wood, glass, marbles, etc. It is also used in lump for grinding and smoothing metallic surfaces, leather, etc., and in the preparation of parch-ments, etc. Quantities of the pulyerized pumice are used in making fancy soaps.

Something He Didn't Know. In the war with France, previous to the French revolution, an English drummer not more than fifteen years of age, having wandered from his camp too near the French lines, was seized and brought before the French commander. On being asked who he was by the general he answered, "A drummer in the English service." This not gaining credit, a drum was sent for, and he was desired to beat a couple of marches, which he accordingly did. The Frenchman's suspicion being, however, not quite removed, he desired the drummer to beat a retreat. "A retreat, sir?" replied the youth. "I don't know what that is." The answer so pleased the French officer that he dismissed the drummer and wrote to his general commending his spirited be-
