FUR TRADERS.—The Mair Brothers, of Fort Dalhousie, intend despatching a vessel to Europe as soon as navigation in the Lower St. Lawrence is open. They will load the barque Niagara, now undergoing a few necessary repairs at Andrew's dock, with timber and staves, giving the command to Capt. Zealand, of Hamilton. The Messrs. BRITISH BEAUTY.—The conclusion I have come to about female beauty and comeliness is, that in no part of the earth are there faces to be compared with those seen within the British Isles. In most countries I have visited—except American, where, however, the bloom soon dies—the good looking are very rare. And let me observe, by the way, that there are many current sayings about the characteristics of various countries and their people from which I must dissent. Among these are such as. that the French are the merriest nation, and the English the dullest—the very reverse of the assertion being true and that the Greeks and Italians have the "dreamiest looks,"—the fact being that they are in general wizened scarecrows as compared with our own.—*Norman Macleod, D. "Sub Rosa."

The words are Latin and signify "under the rose" in allusion to an ancient custom of placing the rose, as an emblem of secrecy over the head of the guests, and implied that implicit confidence might be placed in the guests that nothing they said would be allowed to go farther. This was done that all might feel at their ease, and that no advantage would be taken of their words thus said freely and with out premeditation. And although there is no rose now placed over friends in their social moments, yet there is an implied bond of confidence, and it is considered dishonorable to make public, that which one friend may pour into the bosom of another in the unguarded moments of social intercourse.

PRINTER'S COPY.—The following, which we clip from a Sarnia paper, we commend to the notice of our friends in various parts of this County and elsewhere who have and may hereafter, kindly furnish us with items of the nature referred to :—

"There is now no doubt that 'Printer's copy,' that is matter intended for publication in newspapers, such as accounts of accidents, inquests, public meetings, minutes of councils, or other local occurrences, may be sent through the Post Office to the publishers of newspapers, at the rate of one cent an ounce, the same as printed matter, provided it is put up in a wrapper or envelope, open at both ends, and does not contain any private business correspondence, or memoranda, other than the real name of the sender, as a guarantee for its correctness. The object of this arrangement is to facilitate the diffusion of information on all general subjects, and is an evidence of the desire of the P. O. Department to deal so liberally towards the public and the press, as circumstances will permit; and we now refer to it for the purpose of soliciting our friends throughout the Country to avail themselves of the privilege, by sending us in this way accounts of local occurrences of the description above referred to. We willingly publish all such matter gratis and not only so, but will consider ourselves under obligations to all who will send us notes of anything occurring in their respective neighborhoods, which they think likely to interest the public, either locally or more generally."

A Funny Speech.

The Wisconsin Legislature has formally considered a proposition to abolish all laws for the collection of debts. The mover of the bill, Mr. Hansen, in a great many as is evinced by the following extract from his speech on that subject:

The speaker proceeded to review the present system of collecting debts. It was all a humbug and a cheat, a matter of technicalities and legal shuffling. Lawyers were advised in order to obtain fees and encourage litigation. Judges made blunders and mistakes. He had a little experience in the law, and that was rich. (Laughter.) He would give a history of it. The speaker then related how he had purchased a yoke of oxen about fifteen years ago—paid fifty dollars for them; a few days after, the son of the man of whom he bought the oxen came to him and said the oxen were his. He insisted on having the pay over again, and commenced a suit before a justice. The jury didn't agree. Finally through the borrowed Justice of the Peace the case went against him. He appealed to the Circuit Court in Milwaukee. There I lost again, and said to my lawyer: I will give you ten dollars to quote Pennsylvania law to Judge Miller, and get a new trial ordered. (Great laughter.) He took the ten dollars and performed his duty. A new trial was granted, and the venue changed to Walworth county, Judge Irwin being then the Judge. Any man who wanted to gain a cause in this court had either to go hunting with him and let the Judge shoot all the game that was shot, or put his dog. I patted his dog. (Laughter.) I fed the dog crackers, (Renewed laughter.) The case was decided in my favor. When I heard the decision, I thought the dog had followed me long enough—I turned and gave him a kick. (Laughter.) The yelp of the dog had hardly subsided ere I heard the Judge say, "Mr. Clark, this judgement is set aside and a new trial granted." Mr. Speaker that kick cost me $300! (Conclusive laughter.) You have no doubt seen a suit in Justice's court in the country? There is no time spent by jurors and hangers-on, besides other costs, at least $50 besides the ill feelings and discussion caused by it. It is all a cheat. The litigants had better sit down and play a game of old sledge to decide the case. It would be more sure to settle the dispute justly."

A Poser.

This story is relative as a veritable fact of a Dutch Justice residing in the pleasant valley of the Hudson, not a thousand miles from Albany.

He kept a small tavern, and was not remarkable for the acuteness of his mental perceptions, nor would it appear was one of his customers much better off in the matter of 'gumption.' One morning a man stepped in and bought a bottle of small beer. He stood talking a few minutes, and then said:

I am sorry I purchased this beer. I wish you would exchange it for some crackers and cheese to the same amount.

The simple boniface readily assented and the man took the plate of crackers and ate them. As he was going out the landlord hesitatingly remined him that he hadn't paid for them.

Yes I did, said the customer; I gave you the beer for them.

Vell, den, I knowish dat; but den you have not give me de monish for the beerish.

But I didn't take the beer; there stands the same bottle now!

The old tavern keeper was astonished. He looked sedate and confused; but all to no purpose was his laborious thinking. The case was still a mystery.

Vell, den, said he at length I don't see how it ish; I got the beerish—yaas, I got the beerish but den sometimes, I got no monish! Vell, you keeps the crackers and cheese; but I don't vant any more of your custom. You can keeps away from my tavern.

NO WONDER.—A young lady remarked that she could not understand what her brother saw in the girls that he liked so well; and for her part, she would not give the company of one young man for that of twenty girls.

A PRIMITIVE PAIR OF BROTHERS.—A correspondent of the Elgin Curier vouches for the following:—Near the banks of the Devron there live two brothers, who occupy a small piece of land; and about this season of the year one may be seen holding the old fashioned "zimmer" plough, and the other doing duty as a horse. While drawing the plough lately, one of the brothers felt unwell, and thought it expedient to consult a neighbouring medical gentleman, who examined him minutely, and prescribed a blister for his chest. A few days afterwards, the doctor, while going his rounds, met the patient's brother, and enquired how George was, and if the blister gave him any relief. "O," replied the brother; we hadna a kist to put the blister on, but we put it on a hand-box, and George is weel eneuch? Well," answered the doctor with a grin, "that's all right if he's better."

☞ There is a member of Congress from one of the New England States who is so fearful of committing himself, he declines to give an opinion upon the most ordinary topic. "Why, really," replied the slow coach, "I cannot say; you must ask some older member of Congress than I am."
