

HUSBAND'S HEROIC STRUGGLE USELESS

Sprung into Seething Water of Niagara to Rescue Wife, but in Vain.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., June 6.—A most thrilling tragedy and attempted rescue took place in the river between the first and second Sister Islands this afternoon when Mrs. Sarah Cohen, 28 years old, the wife of Louis Cohen of Buffalo, jumped into the river between the islands and her husband and husband looked on. Mr. Cohen quickly jumped to her rescue and in a minute the husband and wife were swept down under the little bridge between the two islands, the swift current bobbing them along like corks. Here Cohen seized the woman, but her body was jammed between a rock and a log and he could not lift her to the surface. Those who saw him in the water did not know what brought him there. Only his head and shoulders were to be seen. Nobody knew anything about it until the current had been dragged under by the current. It was twenty minutes before a rope was brought from the main shore and cast to Cohen and he managed to hold it until he was pulled to the island exhausted. As he was hurried away he asked if his wife had been rescued. She had not been seen. He insisted that she was there. Men hurried back last in time to see her body float to the surface and start down stream. They ran to the foot of the island and caught it as it came down with the current. It was turned over to Constable Cot tonight. Cohen can give no reason for his wife's act.

But Concessionaires Say They Will Go On With Game.

Los Angeles, June 6.—Word has reached here that President Diaz of Mexico has decided that he will not sanction the proposed race track at Tia Juana, because such action might be construed as an unfriendly act to California, a state of a friendly power. This authoritative statement was made at San Diego by a member of the Mexican party which escorted the "Silver" to Mexico City. The attitude of Diaz was revealed by a remark of a high Mexican official that Diaz would do nothing to encourage a sport on the Mexican border which had been barred by the United States. Despite this news those interested expect no trouble with the project with the plant and conducting racing as planned. L. Cohen who with attorney Wm. Anderson, Earl F. Low and Clem Creveling hold a concession from the Mexican government said: "We have a concession signed by the Vice-president of Mexico permitting us to operate a race track at Tia Juana for a number of years. This document was signed with the consent of President Diaz. We stand on this concession and go ahead with our plans, unless something else turns up."

CIRCUS DELAYED.

And Calgary Sad—Floods Tie Up C.P.R. Main Line.

Calgary, Alta., June 6.—The disastrous floods continuing among the Rocky Mountains and traffic is completely tied up at places on the main line of the C.P.R. There has not been a train through the city for a day and a large number of both east and westbound passengers are unable to reach their destinations. Between Sycamore and Revelstoke serious floods have been caused by a log jam in the river, which has caused the water to flood the track for over a mile, and several transcontinental trains have been held on either side and their hundreds of passengers are being housed and fed at the expense of the railway company. Those from the west are being fed in dining cars, while those from the east are being cared for at the Revelstoke Hotel. Among the trains held up on the west side of the flood is Norris & Rowe's circus train. It will, however, be about the first to be allowed to pass, as the animals are suffering from want of proper food. Washouts have occurred at other points along the line, but these have all been repaired, and as soon as the blockade of logs can be removed from the river near Sycamore and the floods abate, the train service will be in operation again.

THE GATEWAY TO THE EAST.

The Land of the Pharaohs in the Days of the Khedive.

Cairo, Egypt, May 9.—Egypt is the gateway of the east. Entering it, the Occidental is bewildered and delighted by its strange confusion of color and its hazy atmosphere. Looking out of it, the Oriental gazes with indifference, tinged with contempt, upon the curiously dull and congested west. Here is Egypt, the cradle of civilization, the fountain of both western and eastern law and religion, the twentieth century lands the gate between the two worlds. Here the most enlightened Moslems are making the last great stand for the revival of Islam. Here the missionary from Wisconsin is battling for the ultra-Protestant type of Christianity. Opposed to both are the reactionary and non-progressive Moslems and the ancient Coptic church, most conservative of Christian bodies.

Here the patriotic Egyptian nationalist is making a fight for the political independence of his country. He is not from here directed, in part, the bloodless revolution which gave Turkey a constitutional government. He is not from here directed, in part, the bloodless revolution which gave Turkey a constitutional government. He is not from here directed, in part, the bloodless revolution which gave Turkey a constitutional government.

Here is a country nominally subject to the Sultan of Turkey and nominally a part of the Ottoman Empire. It is a country of the East, a country of the East, a country of the East. It is a country of the East, a country of the East, a country of the East. It is a country of the East, a country of the East, a country of the East.

Here one sees parading the streets a well drilled and well set-up regiment of soldiers. It is a part of the Egyptian army. It is a part of the Egyptian army. It is a part of the Egyptian army. It is a part of the Egyptian army. It is a part of the Egyptian army.

Here is the River Nile, the lifeblood of the Egyptian people. It is a part of the Egyptian people. It is a part of the Egyptian people. It is a part of the Egyptian people. It is a part of the Egyptian people. It is a part of the Egyptian people.

On every side one sees the evidence of the meeting of the east and the west. The Oriental is here, the Occidental is here. The Oriental is here, the Occidental is here. The Oriental is here, the Occidental is here. The Oriental is here, the Occidental is here.

The educated Oriental delights in the society of the west. Occidentals who make their winter homes in Cairo hotels. The American girl stopping here to see the sights of the city. The American girl stopping here to see the sights of the city. The American girl stopping here to see the sights of the city.

The Khedive lives in splendor, but in the Occidental and not Oriental splendor. His palace is European, there he entertains his guests. He is a European, there he entertains his guests. He is a European, there he entertains his guests. He is a European, there he entertains his guests.

One sees a black man in a gay dress with three deep scarlet earring—a slave. Slavery still exists in Egypt despite the conscience of England, but it is a form which has long since been abolished in the country. Any slave who has his freedom by asking for it has no other requirements, however, strange to say there are many slaves who do not make the request.

THE DOWNFALL OF ABDUL THE CURSED

Abject Appeals to His Former Ministers and Military Chiefs for Help.

Constantinople, May 3.—Apparently Abdul Hamid fell without putting forth a hand to save himself. In reality, however, he fought very hard for his throne with the only weapon which he knew how to use.

For instance, when the Macedonians seized the forts at the Black Sea end of the Bosphorus. It was a scorching hot day and the Macedonians were tired and thirsty when they reached the town. At their earnest request they were conducted to a fountain.

"This," remarked their guide, "is the Hamidian fountain. It is so called because it was erected by our Padishah."

Then we'll never lose our lips with the water of that kaffir, (infidel), said one of the Macedonians, all of whom were tired and thirsty.

Most disastrous of all to Abdul Hamid was the way in which his best swordsmen, his bravest and his most trusted, turned against him.

The present writer has seen Albanian march "hodjas" to jail with a feeble ceremony as if these holy men were of the right of the people.

On being interrogated by the officer in charge, the hodja took a high attitude and began to pray. In his hands, whereupon the officer cut him short, saying:

"I think you have more need of them than I have at the present moment."

On his way to Constantinople Nizami Bey, one of the great Turkish revolutionaries, made his train stop for an hour at Gumuldjina, where palace padshahs had been trying to get up some excitement over Abdul Hamid's visit to the mosque.

"I know that there are people here who want to make trouble for the Young Turks. I have no doubt that the present moment to find out who these people are, for I must go to Constantinople, but on my return I will stop here, and if I then find that these people are still trying to create trouble I will have them hanged to the trees on the roadside."

Since that time the reactionaries at Gumuldjina have been extremely quiet.

On the morning of April 24, when the Macedonians closed in on the city, Yildiz attempted for a moment a feeble offensive. The palace troops advanced, but, on catching sight of 1,500 Macedonian infantry and three batteries on a hill at Shishli, they fell back again.

When night fell on Yildiz it was found that the water and gas and electricity had been cut off. There were no supplies of food had been intercepted. Famine soon made its appearance; therefore, for Yildiz was provisioned daily and there were many mouths to be fed, with chamberlains, secretaries, body guards, and aides-de-camp, (500 persons), ladies and sons, (300 persons), and daughters of the Sultan, with their respective suites, (100 persons) and the personnel of the harem (127), the personnel of the kitchen (300), the personnel of the stables (300), doorknockers and other attendants (200), troops forming the immediate palace guard (1,450). On Sunday evening these 4,000 persons had absolutely nothing to eat or drink. When came, the place was in utter darkness, for the candles had been all used up on the preceding night.

of success and firmness of purpose, even slave in Yildiz shared his Padishah's indecision and panic fear.

In proportion as the palace was thus denuded of its guards, who streamed away from it unchecked, like blood from an unbandaged wound, the panic increased among the helpless inmates of the harem, into which the eunuchs carried from the outer world exaggerated accounts of the danger in which Yildiz stood.

These 400 hapless ladies believed that the palace might at any moment be stormed by a licentious soldiery. Some of the eunuchs, some fell into hysterics, and all the rest began to scream until the palace seemed like hell.

There is something tragic in the spectacle of a strong man, with thousands of people dependent on him, collapsing utterly and forever, and he must be confessed that, with all his faults, Abdul Hamid was a man of some greatness, otherwise he would not have been able to master a whole empire.

Abdul Hamid was a man of some greatness, otherwise he would not have been able to master a whole empire. He was a man of some greatness, otherwise he would not have been able to master a whole empire.

place within half an hour, and the blood of all those in it be on your head, Abdul Hamid."

It was the first time that such a message had ever been delivered in Yildiz Kiosk, and it had the effect of a bombshell. The Sultan's servants hastily quitted the Presence without asking permission. The reason of the aged monarch himself seemed for a moment to totter, and, seated on a divan, he drizzled incoherently and interminably.

Whether or not he gave the signal to surrender will never be accurately known, but, after this, things seemed to drift on without him, and, before the hour had elapsed, all the troops in Yildiz had gone out and laid down their arms. Scarcely had they done so when a battalion of Macedonian infantry marched into the palace garden.

Miss Gallagher who is crippled, declares she will fight the case to a finish. "My terrible experience of five years ago has not in the least diminished my fighting qualities," she said.

"Wireless" Surgery.

London, June 2.—Surgery by wireless is the basis of a new treatment for warts, rodent ulcers, birthmarks and skin cancers, demonstrated by Dr. Horace Manders before the Royal Institution of Great Britain. The apparatus consists of an ordinary surgical knife, to the blade of which is attached a wire leading to a storage battery. The current, obtained from the ordinary lighting system, is converted by an invention of Dr. Manders into oscillations of electricity similar to those used in certain systems of wireless telegraphy. When brought into contact with the flesh, these current waves cause a destruction of the tissues. This electricity, according to Dr. Manders, differs from electric cauterization in that there is less shock tendency to bleed after the use of the "wireless" current.

SIMPLE WASH CURES ECZEMA.

Why Salves Fail While a Simple Liquid Has Accomplished Thousands of Cures.

It is now thoroughly established among the best medical authorities that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to a germ, almost always only through the skin. It is not a blood disease at all; in fact, thousands of people suffer with skin disease and are perfectly healthy otherwise, and thereby prove they have no diseased blood.

Smelly salves cannot reach the germs because they do not penetrate the skin. The only way to reach the germs is by means of a penetrating liquid.

Such a liquid can be obtained by simply mixing ordinary oil of wintergreen with thymol, glycerine and ether healing agents. This compound, known as D.D.D. Unrescription, stops the itch instantly—and the cures will appear to be permanent. In fact, it took thousands of cases after case after case, before the best scientific authorities were convinced of the absolute merit of this remedy. D. D. D. Prescription kills the germs in the itching skin. Its effect is seen within one minute after the first application. The cure is even quicker if D. D. D. Soap is used in connection with the treatment.

And, looking at his watch, he turns his head and rides slowly down the line of frantically cheering soldiers. For on this day of days he has taken command of the vanguard himself, he knows Abdul's little tricks and is resolved to take no chances.

The Padishah hears that cheer, and soon after, he gets the curt message of the Marshal. For an instant his face works with rage, the helpless rage that ruined the game, and whose hard, sarcastic face opposite him with slow, deliberate cruelty with exasperating superhuman knowledge of the game, seeing through every bluff with the perfect vision of a man who knows his opponent's hand by heart, mercilessly defeating every humble attempt to prevent it at least from being a grand smash, and slowly prolonging the agony with the inhuman zest of a Tarquedam.

Then new enterprises. A fresh flood of light on Saturday night, when the Padishah, a last message to Marshal Chetkoff Pasha. The Marshal's answer is the same as before, save that the time is now reduced to half an hour, instead of an hour, and that there is added to the original message a clause which the Sultan's envoy hesitates to repeat. Out it comes at last. "This is my last message. Bombardment of the palace will take place within half an hour, and the blood of all those in it be on your head, Abdul Hamid."

It was the first time that such a message had ever been delivered in Yildiz Kiosk, and it had the effect of a bombshell. The Sultan's servants hastily quitted the Presence without asking permission.
