

All "cocoa" is not cocoa. All Lowney's is all cocoa.

Here are some facts you should know if you want to be sure of pure cocoa.

The use of alkali and starch in cocoas is quite common. Some manufacturers even defend these methods. Eminent physicians do not.

Analyses of some cocoas have shown the use of such adulterants as animal fat, cocoa shells, sea biscuit and coarse branny flour.

It is quite possible that you have never tasted pure cocoa. By pure cocoa we mean clean cocoa beans, ground fine and relieved of the excess cocoa butter—with no other ingredients added.

Lowney's is just pure cocoa. It has nothing added to cheapen it. Its full, inimitable flavor is due to the unvarying standards followed in our Montreal factory.

Lowney's is simply delicious because it is all cocoa—made from skillfully blended cocoa beans of the choicest quality.

Sold by grocers. In tins—10c to 50c sizes.

The British steamer Vermorel, with 123 passengers on board, was wrecked yesterday off Leixes outside the port of Oporto. Eighty-four passengers were saved by life lines from the shore, but it is reported that fifteen were thrown out of the basket and perished. The steamer Hollandia stood by the Vermorel all the morning but the tremendous seas made it impossible to render any assistance, as the stranded vessel could not be reached by boats, but finally life savers managed to get their lines aboard. When the Hollandia left, the work of rescue was still going on but was feared the ship would break up rapidly. The Vermorel which was bound from Glasgow to Brazil thence to New York, was owned by Lampitt and Holt lines.

The British steamer Almerian, from Galveston, Newport News, to Liverpool, came into Queenstown harbor crippled and battered, but under her own steam. The Almerian encountered a hurricane on January 10th; next day she shipped a big sea which killed a sailor and swept the decks clean, smashed steering gear and stove in hatches. The Lord Erne, which left Cardiff on Jan. 6th for New York, took the Almerian in tow on Jan. 12th, but two steel hawsers snapped and she had to give up the attempt. The Almerian then shaped her course for Queenstown. The British steamer Avalon, which left New York for Boston, encountered the same gales, and was compelled to put back to Queenstown where she arrived in a disabled condition, with rudder broken, all boats washed away and her deck a mass of wreckage; a great sea knocked Capt. Frankland off the bridge, fracturing several ribs. Five seamen were also injured; they were transferred to hospital, and the ship docked for repairs.

Four Hundred Stalwarts Escort Coaker and Lloyd Through Settlements in Port-de-Grave District. Enthusiastic Meeting and Hall Packed.

Special Evening Telegram.
PORT DE GRAVE, To-day.

Tory forts along the Port de Grave ridge are fallen. Coaker has them all. Yesterday was the biggest day known along this shore. The Brigus band met Coaker and Lloyd. Delegates entrained to Clarke's Beach, where 100 members with Union sashes, banners and flags formed a parade and marched to Ship Cove. Many scores of flags were up, strings of flags across the streets and arches of all kinds with Union mottoes were to be seen around. By the time Ship Cove was reached at least 400 men were in the procession. Cheering was enthusiastic in all the settlements and salves of musketry met the parade all along the route. The Orange band played beautifully lively airs. The parade disbanded at the Orange Hall. Coaker, the F. P. U. and Lloyd were vociferously cheered along the four or five miles of the march. At 6 p.m. the hall was packed with standing men who applauded and shouted with enthusiasm for four hours, when the public meeting had to be closed at 10 p.m., so that the delegates might hold their District Convention. Coaker spoke for two hours and Lloyd followed for an hour and a half. Fishermen say it was the best meeting ever held here. Coaker told what the Union had done to keep up the price of fish and to provide food and goods at cheaper rates. He pointed out the main planks in the platform, and told any supporter of Sir Edward Morris to wire him and tell him Coaker says the Morris Government will be the last Tory Government in Newfoundland, and we will turn them out next fall. This was received with stout applause and repeated. Lloyd spoke as a Liberal and as a supporter of Sir Robert Bond, and also as a helper in the Union cause. He strongly advocated unionism, defended Coaker from Tory insults, attacked the Tory Government and denounced the Morris Ministers. He proved the value of voluntary combination and emphasized what could be done by political action in turning down the Tory Government. They must put a practical statesman of tried ability and integrity at the head of the Government, or the political movements would fail. During the four hours the hall rung and rung with the hearty cheers of 400 stalwart fishermen.

S.S. Erik Broken Down

EN ROUTE TO HALIFAX.

The S.S. Erik, Capt. Lewis, arrived last night from Sydney with a load of coal for Job Bros. The Erik left here early in December with a part cargo of fish. She proceeded to Twillingate and completed her cargo, after which she left for Halifax. Boisterous weather was encountered. The ship had a hard time and sustained serious damage. After being two days at sea, in the height of a N. E. hurricane, the Erik became disabled, and after several days of heavy seas and after combating the elements for a considerable time, her engines broke down, her trust shaft was broken and coupling bolts loosened. Capt. Lewis had a trying experience but managed to navigate the ship to Halifax harbor safely. After unloading her fish cargo the Erik was dry docked and underwent complete repairs. She then left for Sydney and took from there a coal cargo. Capt. Lewis and crew are well.

The Home Rule Bill GONE TO HOUSE OF LORDS Had 110 Majority in Commons.

Special Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.

After a long stern battle, the Home Rule Bill passed the House of Commons to-night by a majority of 110. It was later read for the first time in the House of Lords. There were two divisions in the Lower House. Mr. Balfour's motion for its rejection was defeated by 258 to 368, but while the third reading carried by a vote of 367 to 257, one member on each side left the House in the interval. The result of the division was too much of a foregone conclusion for a tremendous demonstration, but Irishmen inside and outside of the House did their best, and assisted by Liberals and Laborites gave the measure for which they had waited so long, a good send off on its way to the House of Lords, where its fate is certainly sealed. The division was preceded by another series of brilliant speeches by political leaders, among whom were Frederick E. Smith and the Solicitor General, Sir John A. Simon, two of the cleverest among the younger members, and the veterans John E. Redmond, Timothy Healey and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland. The House was crowded throughout the day. The Nationalists were only one short of their full strength. Sir P. Nannetti being prevented from attending by a paralytic attack which he suffered to-day. Several of the older Nationalists who were unable to attend, came from Ireland for the debate. The Liberals and Laborites too, turned out in force and the Unionists were not far below their total membership. The galleries likewise, were filled to their capacity; those occupying seats included many dignitaries of the Church and the Bulgarian Pence Plenipotentiaries.

What One Man Did!

The following letter is rather interesting: "Mr. J. R. Hamilton, Dear Sir:—I have been wearing all this winter an overcoat which I bought at a Clearance Sale a year ago. Somewhere I had read one of your articles and I made up my mind to try out your medicine."

"This was a $40 overcoat for which I paid $25. I know it was a $40 overcoat because I had seen it so marked earlier in the season."

"I bought that overcoat in January and put it away till fall, and I laughed a little as I did it. But when the first cold days of this Winter came and I found that all I had to do was to go to my closet and take out my new overcoat, instead of going to a store and coming through with $40, I realized how very practical your advice had been."

"My Savings Bank would have paid me 75 cents for the use of that $25 for the year. Your advice netted me a saving of $15 for the same amount."

"This overcoat incident has opened my eyes to the value of reading legitimate advertising and following Clearance Sales."

"I see no reason why I should not save at least $100 on my personal bills this year, and so I am sending you $100 worth of thanks."

"I do not particularly need that $100, but I certainly can use it as well as anybody else and it would seem stupid of me not to save it when all it will cost me is a little common sense."

The writer of this letter has said one thing worth remembering: He did not need the extra money, but he felt that he might as well have it as anybody else. These articles on Clearance Sales have never appeared to your necessity, but simply to the commonest of your common sense.

Here is a paper full of the advertising of bargain Clearance Sales. These values are appearing every day. Even if you have more money than you know what to do with, this kind of saving at least should appeal to your common sense.

Talking Pictures

Edison's Latest Marvel Shown at his Laboratory.

New York, Jan. 3.—Talking movies, the newest invention of Thomas A. Edison, which has been promised for several years, were exhibited to-day by the wizard inventor in his laboratory in East Orange, N. J.

In the six reels of pictures, revealing singers, musical instruments, breaking of dishes, barking of dogs and a variety of other things, the work was suited to the action. There was virtually a perfect synchronizing of sound and action. Scenes from plays and parts of grand opera and musical comedy were given.

With every gesture of the actor came the proper word at the exact time.
