Foreign Enlistment.

A despatch from Washington says that the British Ambassador has asked the State Department to inform him what distinction, if any, it draws between questions of neutrality involved in the return of reservists to those European countries, which have reserve systems and the departure of volunteers to those countries which have no such system. We doubt the story. We are convinced Sir Cecil Spring Rice never put a question in such a form. To raise such a general issue would be futile, as it would not fit the facts of the case, and would be of no practical use. Both sets of belligerents have reserve systems. There are the Newfoundland Naval Reservists. The British Army has reservists. So have the armies of Russia, France, Italy and Serbia. The despatch says the Ambassador points out that reservists have been permitted to return to Germany, Austria and Turkey, whilst legal action has been taken against persons returning volunteers for the British army. This may be so, and we have read of Italian reservists leaving the States to join their colors. The question might arise whether there has been any distinction in treatment of reservists of the two sets of belligerents, and we are not to believe there has been any discrimination shown by the Washington authorities between them. The raising of volunteers in the States for service with a belligerent against a nation with whom the States is at peace is an old question, more than a century old, and the principle adopted by the United States was incorporated in a law of Congress passed in 1794, which was revised and re-enacted in 1818. This law declared it to be a misdemeanor for any person, within the jurisdiction of the United States to hire or enlist troops or seamen for service against a country with whom the United States was not at war. A year or so later the British Parliament enacted a similar measure, and it is a criminal act, for any person in the British dominions, without the King's license, to enlist or induce any other person to enlist in the service of a foreign state at war with a nation which is friendly with us, or to leave or induce any person to leave His Majesty's dominions for such a purpose.

As to Foreign Enlistment, the same principle has been adopted by the British and Americans, and the British Ambassador would not stultify himself by objecting to the carrying out of a law adopted by both countries. If it is a fact that the British Ambassador has dealt with the subject at all, we believe it would be only to raise the question whether or not the sending of reservists by German Americans was not as much a breach of the American law, as the raising of volunteers for the British service by pro-Britishers.

The Turk in Jerusalem.

(Manchester Guardian.)

The most grievous shock which the impressionable visitor receives is the sight of Turkish soldiers with rifles in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and again out at Bethlehem, in the sacred Grotto of the Nativity. Here the On Bashi, or corporal, comes on duty and carefully counts the silver lamps in the very grotto itself to see that none has been taken. He carries a short sword and a kourbaje, or rhinoceros-hide whip. Seldom has Palm Sunday passed, or even Easter Day itself, without disturbance. Let us be fair to the Turk. His manner as guardian is exemplary—far more reverent than that of some of the polyglot Christians who swarm in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. And his presence there has been necessary in the circumstances, for the fires of enmity smoulder angrily from generation to generation, and Greek and Latin, Armenian and Copt are apt to quarrel on Resurrection Day.

A great European war—the Crimean—had its birth in petty disputes about privileges and sites in this holiest of churches, where the lighting of a candle or the dusting of a shrine by a too officious monk may start a fray. The Turkish troops are really to be pitted during the Greek Easter, which is the most uneasy time of the whole year. Thousands of Christian pilgrims flock into the city from all lands. Long days of rigid fasting are crowned by the endless ceremonies of Holy Week, ending with the Greek fire—a mystical service which undoubtedly raises the passion to fever heat. Christians abuse the Jews for hours together, and when the holy fire is thrust forth from the sepulchre violence sometimes follows. Large drafts of extra troops are in attendance from the Tower of David. A Yuz Bashi or captain of one hundred, hurries down with experienced non-coms, and men—good-tempered enough fellows who hustle all factions, religions, and nationalities out of the church and the court to cool their frenzy in back lanes. If the Turk, succeeds in this he gets no credit. If he fails a dozen consuls complain to the Mutasarrif and threaten to report that high official to Stamboul.

A double file of troops keeps a path in the Holy Sepulchre, another line make way out in the flagged court, where I have seen the Yuz Bashi himself give his arm to an old Russian lady and lead her to safety out of certain suffocation. On Palm Sunday morning of last year a Latin priest began assiduously to dust a Crusader's tomb at the entrance to the Holy Sepulchre. The Greeks had their eye on him and a week later prepared for the new "annexation" they suspected was in view. The defenders accordingly manned the side galleries of the court, and presently rained down flowerpots and stones upon the Latins. But the watchful Yuz Bashi intervened. It was a drawn battle, with several injured—among the latter some of the Turkish troops were trying to restore order between the two sects.

Items of Interest.

The gathering of further evidence to support the theory that there was once a land bridge stretching across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Great Britain, and thence to a Scandinavia, is one of the purposes of a geological expedition from Princeton University which will visit Newfoundland this summer.

Speaking before the Conference of International Relations at Ithaca, N. Y., last week, Dr. Andrew D. White, former Ambassador to Germany, expressed the belief that the European war will lead to the establishment of a great international tribunal, and the potentates who oppose it will have to step off their thrones. He suggested that such a tribunal might be established at the Hague.

Dr. Auguste Chailion, a young physician connected with the Pasteur Institute, was killed while carrying out the dangerous task of disinfecting bodies lying between the French and German lines. The glittering can containing the disinfectant he carried, caught the eye of a German sentinel, and fire was opened with trench mortars. One of the shells struck Dr. Chailion, killing him instantly.

The overall factory of the Peabody Company, Limited, at Walkerville, Ont., a suburb of Windsor, was partially wrecked by the explosion of a bomb, early on the morning of June 21st. It is believed by Detroit Germans or pro-Germans, angered by the fact that the company is making British military uniforms. Shortly after this explosion, dynamite was found under the rear of the Windsor armoury, all prepared for an explosion, which, fortunately, was frustrated by the fuse prematurely burning out.

Pure chloroform will remove paint, grease and other stains from colored garments. Put clean blotting paper under the spot and pour the chloroform—a few drops—on it, in the open air.

WINARD'S LINDEN LUMBER

Tour of the Prelates.

Special to Evening Telegram.

PLACENTIA, This Afternoon. His Excellency Mgr. Stagni and suite, who are guests of Monsignor Reardon, the past few days, enjoyed a trip by motor boat to Northeast and Southeast Arms yesterday. A pleasant feature of the trip was to witness the hundreds of salmon leaping and breaching around the boat. To-day His Excellency and suite visited the Court House where they were received by Magistrate O'Reilly and shown the curios under his charge. Bishop Power and Chaplains Frs. Sears and St. Croix, who came by train last evening, are also guests at the Court House. His Excellency and suite party leave en route westward by Glencoe at midnight. Bishop March returns to St. John's to-morrow evening. His Excellency and suite expressed themselves delighted with their visit to Placentia, and with the princely hospitality of our beloved Monsignor.—Cor.

Dorothy Baird Arrives

The schr. Dorothy Baird, Capt. Keeping, reached port this morning after a run of 22 days from Barbados. She brought a cargo of molasses to Jas. Baird, Ltd. The vessel would have made a quicker passage but that she was beset on Wednesday morning last and was on the Southern Shore ever since. In the early part of the voyage heavy weather was encountered for a few days and two jibs were carried away, besides some water casks were washed overboard.

Meigle Back From Straits.

The s.s. Meigle, Capt. Goobie, arrived at Humbermouth at 5.30 a.m. to-day, having made all ports of call to Battle Harbor going and returning. The ship reports having met ice from Bonne Esperance to Battle Harbor and was jammed at Chateau for a whole day. All along the coast contrabands have been landed and fishing operations hindered for the past ten days.

In our training of children we are constantly tempted to contradict ourselves. At one time we appeal to their bravery, we solicit courage for doing this or that, for enduring pain or discomfort. Shortly we have occasion to call upon fear of injury, or of disapproval. In one case we exalt courage and laud it as among the highest of virtues and remind the child of all the heroes we have not yet forgotten. But in a few hours we exalt prudence and remind him of the miserable fate of the foolhardy who did not look twice before they leaped. It is not necessary, however, to suppose that courage and caution exclude each other. Fear as a help in training is a double edged weapon. We have learned that obedience based on fear will turn into defiance at the critical point. Parents who rule through a sympathetic understanding and firm hold of the child's needs, are far more successful than those who arouse fear.

Household Notes.

Olive oil and turpentine in equal parts is excellent used with a soft cloth on furniture that has become clouded and gray from dust and dampness.

Stained or polished floors should never be washed with water. To remove the dust, wipe over with a soft cloth, and once a week apply a good floor polish.

For apple snow, bake seven large apples, rub through a sieve, add quarter pound sugar, a little essence of vanilla and the whites of two eggs, well beaten.

Remember that butter, milk and flavors, so keep them right away from such things as cheese, apples, smoked fish or onions.

A teaspoonful of ammonia mixed with a half cupful of cold tea is said to be excellent for cleaning black felt hats or men's black coats. Apply with a bit of cloth.

It is a good idea to provide plenty of clean paper for the kitchen. It can be used when preparing vegetables or fruit, and paper and trimmings can be put into the fire.

Lingerie ribbons should not be ironed whilst wet, or they will become stiff. They should be pulled into a smooth condition, and when dry pressed over with a cool iron.

Don't put anything away in the ice cooked meat or fish wrapped in paper. The paper will absorb the juice of the meat and waste it.

Before starting the canning season, look carefully over your supplies and look carefully into all the modern appliances for canning before setting to work with the old-time methods.

A delicious strawberry fluff is made with strawberry jam. Whip a small jar of stiff cream and a jar of jam together. Split little sponge cakes and put the fluff between them.

Delightful scent bags or pillows may be made with any dry, fragrant leaves of flowers—geranium leaves, rose petals, heliotrope, lemon verbena. Tie in bags of muslin or calico
