THEIR WORK IS DONE.

Final Meeting of Number Three Committee for 1894.

Lack of Fire Alarm Boxes—The Underwriters' Complaint—Other Business and an Oyster Supper.

Four of the victorious candidates in the municipal election were present at the final meeting of No. 3 committee held in the City Hall last night. They were Ald. Parnell (chairman), Wm. Heaman, John Nutkins, another victor, was absent owing to other business, and Ald. Scarrow was confined to his home through illness. However, when the members were making a few parting remarks they did not forget to mention him and wish him a speedy recovery. Every particle of business which could possibly be cleared from the blotter was transacted, leaving the incoming committee almost a clean sheet to start with. The long correspondence of Mr. R. McLean, secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, relative to the deficiencies in the London fire fighting appliances was read. Mr. McLean named several changes which would have to be made to bring London's fire standard into "A" class.

"Is that the Undertakers' or Underwriters' Association?" asked Ald. O'Meara. "I think we should bury that communication and the other three on the same question. Why, I think it is a piece of impudence for them to talk like that. We are paying more insurance now than before we got the waterworks at all."

"That is about true," said Ald. John Heaman. The correspondence was not buried, but was laid over for the new committee to wrestle with.

Chief Roe's report on the condition of the fire alarm system—a summary of which has already appeared in the ADVERTISER—was again read. Ald. O'Meara then tackled the proposition to place uniform fireboxes throughout the city. It was not necessary, as the policeman could easily be drilled into the way of sending in alarms from every kind of box. Then Ald. O'Meara spoke of the great lack of alarm boxes in several parts of the city. He instanced the recent fire in the North End, and moved that a box be placed at the corner of Waterloo and Victoria streets.

"It is no ward-grabbing scheme," he said, "because that locality is not in my ward."

The motion was withdrawn, and Chief Roe was ordered to present a report showing where additional boxes should be placed.

Mr. John Labatt asked that the market bazar be retained as at present. The letter was accordingly laid over.

Inspector Bell reported that the total income collections for the year were $2,170. This was an increase of $89 over 1893.

John Law's communications re the public swimming baths were referred to next year's committee. "They had better be taken up early in the spring, and not held over till the summer is almost past, as they were this year," said Ald. Wm. Heaman.

The tenders for a water-heating apparatus for No. 3 fire station were received, but not considered. A. J. Greenaway's letter regarding repairs to the fire system, and the question of equalizing the market rents were both laid over.

A large batch of accounts were passed, but one from Glasgow Bros. for repairs to the fire alarm clock was referred to the chairman. The work, it was stated, had been given to Simpson & Murray, and the aldermen were puzzled to know how another firm had done it. The circumstances will be learned.

Secretary Bell presented a report stating that 22 meetings had been held in the year. The Ald. Parnell attended 27, Wm. Heaman 29, John Heaman 28, Stephen O'Meara 26, John Nutkins 24, M. Scarrow 23 and Mayor Eassay 17.

That was the finishing touch to the year's business, and Ald. Wm. Heaman spoke of the harmonious work in which the members had worked. He congratulated the chairman on his able management, and moved him a vote of thanks.

Ald. O'Meara seconded, and spoke in the same strain.

Ald. Parnell, in responding, referred to the great pleasure it had given him to preside at the committee's sessions. He also reviewed the business transacted, and concluded with a feeling mention of Ald. Scarrow, who, he hoped, would soon fully recover from his severe illness.

Ald. Parnell then invited the aldermen and officials present to an oyster supper at Boomer's.

FREEMAN'S CASE.

One Particularly Interesting to Women As It Deals With Their Troubles.

LEAMINGTON, Jan. 7.—It has been a cause of wonder to many people why women will neglect the first symptoms, and continue to suffer from ill health, and from debility, when the means of relief can be so readily obtained. Before a cure can be effected the work of the kidneys must be renewed, the blood cleansed of poisonous materials, and the ligaments and muscles strengthened and invigorated. The history of the case of Miss Nettie Freeman, of this village, whose life was saved by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has had one beneficial effect in that it has aroused scores of other women in this locality from the false notion that they were manifesting and as a result the sale of Dodd's Kidney Pills have been enormous, and the resultant good commensurate therewith.

FORGIVEN BY HER FATHER.

A pathetic scene occurred in the Yorkville court room yesterday, when Ann Anicka, of No. 131 Harris street, Jersey City, accompanied by her father, Josef Anicka, appeared against Katie Anicka, aged 19, a beautiful and stylishly-dressed girl. Some time ago that Katie had left her home about three months ago. He had spent much time and money in the search, but failed to find his wayward daughter until Saturday, when he discovered her in a boarding-house at 144 east Twenty-second street and caused her arrest.

"Please, take me away," pleaded Katie, with streaming eyes, as she clasped her arms about her father's neck.

The old man shook his head and pushed her away. Then Katie dropped on her knees before the judge's bench, and clasping her arms about her father's legs, wept aloud.

"Oh, papa, papa," she wailed, "don't send me away; I'll be a good girl and won't do wrong again." A policeman had to drag the girl into an adjoining room, where she continued to plead till the old man relented and forgave her. Then Justice Denon sent them all home.—[New York Tribune.]

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS, WOMAN.

The Fair Sex Discussed by a Famous Frenchman.

Max O'Reil Lectures Brilliantly to a Crowded House.

The world renowned raconteur, gave a most successful lecture entitled "Her Royal Highness, Woman," in the Opera House last night. The large audience, which included many of London's "shining lights" was very appreciative, and Mr. Paul Blouet met with a hearty reception. His style is unique, and one which could never tire his listeners, and from the highest and cleverest witticisms he descends to the most earnest and touching themes. The following are some of the most fetching and clever of the lecturer's remarks:

"Eve goes down on her knees to Adam, confessing her guilt, and then they both kneel down together, and the first story of real love is told."

"The French, who worship grace and beauty, give to women what no other nation does. Woman is their fixed ideal, for we consider woman greatly superior to ourselves—not that they are—but it is an ideal."

"Emerson said: 'England produced the finest and ugliest women.' This is true, and when she is pretty she is incomparable when ugly, ugly!"

"I am not going to discuss tonight women of the 'Upper Ten,' for they are all alike the world over. For example, she who is the new high society handshakes one finds the new high society handshakes one finds the natives only a few years ago were in the way of dress, well—(pause)—a smile, this fashionable handshakes exists, and the fashionable set will be recognized at once by it."

"The politics of matrimony is a science unknown to French women. They lead the men just as they please, but without letting their power be felt. What about the new woman? She tries to lead men and lets them know it. She will fall altogether."

"When the French woman marries, she gains her liberty, the English woman loses it, just as the American retains it."

"A little piece of advice I would venture to give any young man here intending to marry. If you should have to choose between living with your mother-in-law or shooting yourself, don't hesitate a moment, shoot her."

"A French woman never wears her hair in the same way longer than a fortnight at a time (the best dishes may sometimes become insipid if they are always seasoned with the same sauce). She knows on what slender threads love sometimes hangs."

"I am sure that the Great Giv' did not intend landlord, tenant and laborer all three to exist. The French peasant does all herself. She combines the three. It is she who feeds the pigs early in the morning and that is why they look so well."

"The English servant thinks money, because it is round, is meant to roll, and forthwith with her week's wages buys a new bonnet and has her photograph taken. But the French peasant thinks that as money is flat it is meant to pile up, and she accordingly takes her wages to the savings bank."

"The typical American does not exist, but if Jonathan doesn't, Mrs. Jonathan does. With American women, men feel perfectly at their ease, the frankness of their eyes, and extreme individuality are always noticeable. (Theaters and oysters almost every liberty. She takes the others. She has her own reception day. If a young fellow takes her fancy—I do not say touches her heart—she is at perfect liberty to ask him to visit her on her next at-home day. They may even go to the theater together, and afterwards enjoy a little tete-a-tete (Theaters and oysters are cheap in America.) And if the young fellow orders the waiter to bring half a bottle of champagne, it is possible she will say, 'What are you going to have.' After supper she would be taken home, and she would let herself in with her latch key. American girls are being now taught in Paris, and I am glad of it, although, of course, I am personally out of the field just now."

"This independence in American girls is due to the fact that boys and girls from their earliest days are much together. They meet at high school and colleges and opposite to the feelings of English boys and girls, the American boy likes the girl, and the American girl holds the opposite sex somewhat in contempt, for she can afford to do so, being equally and indeed very often the cleverest."

"A few serious words in closing: Never profane the three words, 'I love you,' and perhaps ruin a girl thereby. Much of our leisure time might be spent in strengthening the bonds of friendship between the paths of girls and women. Some will say roses have thorns, but there are no thorns in woman, and she is the very rose of man's life."

Dyspepsia.

Mental disquietude and the constant anxieties, discouragement and feeling of unfortunateness among people who are pleasantly situated, and prospering, is an indication of dyspepsia. If dyspepsia do not affect about their own misfortunes they are often prone to dwell on the perplexities of others. This state of mind, while produced by derangements of the digestive organs, tends to increase their derangement. A positive cure for dyspepsia is Esch's Liver Laxative, which can be obtained from any druggist at 25 cents a box or 5 boxes for a dollar.

Even His Wife's Death Did Not Cause Michael to Awake.

ELMIRA, Jan. 9.—Michael Fernan has finished the sixth consecutive year of his sleep. His wife, who watched over him all this time, died last week, and her body has been taken to Scranton for burial. During the two days that Mrs. Fernan's body lay in state all possible means to arouse her husband were employed without avail.

Fernan and his wife emigrated from Ireland and went to Scranton a good many years ago, and in 1892 they removed to Factoryville, a small station on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, about 30 miles north of Scranton, at the mouth of the Factoryville tunnel. Fernan was employed as a watchman at the tunnel. One day in December, 1893, he completed his day's work, went home, ate his supper and went to bed. The next morning he could not be aroused, nor all that day. A physician was summoned, but he could do nothing. Fernan remained in a comatose state. In the course of a week a consultation of physicians was summoned, but they could do nothing more than prescribe a means of giving nourishment. In 1892 Fernan was brought to Elmira by his nephew, John Fernan, a fireman on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, residing in this city. The sleeper was taken to the home of John Kelly, at the corner of Day and Oak streets, and he has since resided there with his wife.

During the four and one-half years of his sleep at Factoryville, he opened his eyes only twice. He did not speak, merely looking about the room. Then he closed them and again went to sleep. In September last, while he was in this city, he awoke, and it was thought he was going to sleep. He looked about him, apparently recognized his wife, and then stared at the ceiling. His wife summoned the neighbors and they took Fernan out of bed and tried to make him walk, but the effort was unsuccessful. He was replaced in bed and in a few hours had again closed his eyes. Fernan is 55 years of age. He is apparently very weak, and the physicians predict his death before he awakes.

PRETTY POKER PLAYERS.

Serious Society Scandal Reported From Ottawa.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—The Presse publishes a special dispatch from Ottawa exposing a fashionable gambling club, composed of men and women, and alleged to be in full sway at Sandy Hill. The dispatch says that Montreal is represented there by a lady well known in high life, and St. John, N. B., has also its representative. It adds that the stakes are large, and many husbands have reason to regret that they introduced their wives into that Canadian Monte Carlo, for it is stated that one of them, who recently met with bad luck, gave a mortgage on her husband's splendid residence in order to cover her losses. Whiskey mixed with water is said to be a favorite method used to keep up the spirits of the players, and the influence is reported to be far from homeopathic. Efforts are being made, it is stated, to hush up the whole affair, but fears are entertained that some losers will divulge the secret, and thus cause a great scandal.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought numerous medicine bottles and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured."
