HEIR KNITS FOR POOR

Little Prince Edward Exhibits Mufflers at Exhibition.

London, Dec. 4.-On leaving for India the Princess of Wales said to her children: "Be good, and do just as you would as if I were at home." That this advice has been followed is clear, as at the recent needlework exhibition at the Imperial Institute. many knitted mufflers made by Prince Edward, Prince Albert and Princess Mary were on view. With royal generosity all the muffiers were intended for the poor. Knitting is only a comparatively nev accomplishment in the royal nursery The Princess of Wales for many years has knitted woolen things for the poor and last year Princess Mary begged for knitting needles that she might "work like mother." Her two eldest brothers were not long in following the example thus set them. The mufflers shown at the Imperial Institute were the first successful efforts of the royal children. Under the supervision of their mother the little princes and princess commenced them, and their only regret was that they had not finished before their mother left fo
