THE POISON IN ICE CREAM.
Reasons Given by Physicians for its Presence There.
Medical men generally, we believe, regard ice cream as one of the least harmful forms of sweet food. It is permitted by their physicians to eat it when every other sort of sweet is absolutely proscribed; and, in health, there is probably no other kind of refreshment more popular, particularly in the summer.

It is an unquestionable fact, however, that serious and even fatal cases of poisoning occur almost every season from eating ice cream. On Sunday last, for example, in Syracuse, fifty children were made dangerously ill as the result of eating ice cream which was sold on the streets by an itinerant vendor. None of them died, but their escape from death in several instances is attributed to the small quantity in which the ice cream was sold to each customer. There was a suspicion that the late Judge Ehrlich died from the same cause.

There are two ways in which physicians endeavor to account for the occasional poisonous effects of ice cream. One is the presence in the compound of some distinct poison, such as arsenic, which has been introduced by the person responsible for making and selling the ice cream, and the independent poison theory by the people who have been made ill. A case of this kind came before the courts of this state some years ago, and finally went to the Court of Appeals, where a verdict of $300 was returned against a firm of druggists for selling an ice cream manufacturer a certain preparation of red coloring matter, designed to give the ice cream a pink tint to look like strawberry. The conviction of the defendant, that the poisonous effects of the coloring matter were due to arsenic, was rejected by the jury, but perhaps this was not very strange, inasmuch as the evidence in behalf of the defendant showed that there was arsenic in the liquid which they sold. Their expert witnesses declared that the proportion of arsenic was not large enough to hurt anyone who ate the ice cream, but the jury thought otherwise.

We may add, that the testimony, upon the trial of the particular case to which we refer, tended to show that chocolate ice cream was the least likely of all kinds to be wholesome. It seems that ice cream makers, when other sorts of ice cream have grown somewhat stale and unpalatable, can conceal the age and undesirability of the compound by the liberal use of chocolate.—New York Sun.

A solution of resorcin (1 in 3) is recommended as a more delicate test of albumen in urine than nitric acid. It is stated that resorcin will produce a cloudiness of albumen when nitric acid will not give any result at all. The urine is allowed to flow from a pipette onto the solution of resorcin, when a white ring will become apparent if albumen is present.
