

C.N.R. HAVE COMPLETED RIGHT OF WAY PURCHASE

Work on Ottawa to Belleville Section of its Toronto Line to Be Begun This Fall.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—(Special).—The Canadian Northern Railway has completed the purchase of the right of way of its line from Belleville to Ottawa, via Smith's Falls. The building of the new line will start this fall. The first five miles of the new line have already been approved, and the work will begin at the Ottawa end. The line will be built on the southeast side of the Rideau Canal till it reaches the Hunt Club, or thereabouts, when it will turn and cross the river, where there is some steel bridge will be constructed. Another line which is under consideration by the C. N. R. is that from Ottawa to Far Harbor. From the plans so far drawn up it would branch off the Toronto line at the bridge above Hog's Back. The right of way has not as yet been bought for this line, but it is expected that options will be taken very shortly on the property. The Hawkesbury line will also branch off from the Toronto line between here and the proposed bridge above Hog's Back, thus the Toronto line will be the main one. As no entrance has been effected into the heart of the city, the lines will come in at the present station. It is expected, however, that when the new line is built, a new entrance will have to be found.

THE EMPIRE SHOW.

"The Empire Show," one of the most prominent in the latter day burlesque field, is to be next week's attraction at the Star Theatre. Seldom, if ever on record, has an attraction of this calibre been organized and so thoroughly equipped both as to company and production in general as has "The Ducklings for the present season's tour, which it may be incidentally added has been one of phenomenal success. Two big extravaganzas are presented, the opening being, "Oh, You Lemon," and closing with the gigantic musical spectacle, "A Night on a Roof Garden," and it is but putting it mildly to class these two productions as the nearest approach to New York musical comedy in the history of burlesque. The principals include the names of such established favorites as Frank Damsel and Florence Farr, McDonald and Price, Blanche Martin, leading boys, Alice Brophy, Katherine Rose, Young Bros., Harry Matheson and several others, besides thirty-five singing and dancing girls, who are classed as the classiest bevy of "broilers" attached to any attraction of the current season.

WILL NOT BUILD ROAD.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 26.—(Special).—Wm. Mackenzie, in an interview here, intimated that the C. N. R. was not likely to take over the Albert & Great Waterways Railway project.

A Whiskered Bride.
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 26.—Grace Albert, who has been the "bearded lady" attraction of several shows, was married here to-day to Glen E. Calvin, a farmer of Kalkaska, Mich. The bride has a beard 18 inches long, while the groom boasts nothing but a mustache.

Canada a Model.
LONDON, Oct. 26.—Cardinal Logue, interviewed, declared that no people were more loyal than the Canadians. He drew the conclusion that the Irish would be just as loyal if treated in the same way.

An indicator shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain. It has an automatic flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be unscrewed in an instant for reworking. VARITY'S PLACE IN PRACTICAL TRAINING course, he said, was not intended of itself to make architects; it was expected that the men would go out and obtain practical experience for themselves after graduation.

Labor Witnesses.
The first of the labor witnesses, who appeared in the evening, was Burleigh Aikens, representing the machinists' union, who stated that he obtained his training by serving an apprenticeship of three years nine months, during which period he attended two technical school sessions, which had undoubtedly helped him. He approved of correspondence schools, but thought the benefit was not so great as where the pupil could appeal direct to teachers. The machinists were in favor of a co-operative system of apprenticeship, a week to be spent in the shop and a week in school, turn about. Apprentices did not now receive sufficient training.

Robt. L. Hanwood, a carpenter, had also attended two technical school sessions. He did not consider this sufficient, as the school could not teach the actual trade. He was himself now conducting a class at the Y.M.C.A. in the use of the steel square, a subject in which he thought instruction was very necessary. About 20 young men were in the class, all of them working in the day time.

Fred Crump of the boot and shoe makers' union stated that about 900 men were engaged in the industry in Toronto. It was all machine work, and most of the operatives were skilled in the use of a number of machines. Mr. Crump had three diplomas from technical schools in England, which he described as being of the greatest possible use in training skilled workmen. He was opposed to trade schools, but considered that a technical system, such as that in Leicester, England, would be of immense benefit to the trade in Toronto, where there was now no regular method of instruction.

Iron Moulders Need Schools.
Jas. E. Stuart, an iron moulder, said that no apprentice in his trade; technical classes would be much appreciated for giving the theoretical details of their work, as greater knowledge was bound to produce a better mechanic.

Jas. Richard, a plumber, said that in his own case private study was the only form of instruction he had during his apprenticeship. He thought that the young plumber helpers should have a schedule of hours off arranged, so that they could attend technical classes, which were badly needed in the trade. The Plumbers' Union itself maintained a class for its members.

Robt. Stevenson, a compositor, had learned the trade by actual practice, observation and reading the technical trade journals. The International Typographical Union had prepared a technical course with great care, which had for its object the raising of the standard of the printing trade in America, rather than the filling of any immediate necessity. The attitude of the union towards the establishment of technical schools was favorable, and he did not think such schools would in any way encroach on the work of the classes conducted by the union.

Henry J. McQuillan, a sheet metal worker, stated that his union had paid a correspondence school course for one of its members, who was now about to start a class for the others. This class will be in the nature of an experiment, and Mr. McQuillan agreed to report as to its success at a later date.

This morning the commissioners have arranged to visit the university faculty of applied science, in company with Dean J. Galbraith, after which the technical school will be inspected.

ED AND THOMAS JARDINE HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Latter is Accused as Accessory— Medical Evidence Fixes Time of Murder Before 11 p.m.

GODERICH, Oct. 26.—(Special).—Edward and Thomas Jardine were arrested this afternoon, the former charged with the murder on Sept. 20 of 17-year-old Lizzie Anderson, and the latter with being an accessory after the fact.

The crown theory is that the girl, whose mutilated and nude body was found in an abandoned cellar, was assaulted and then slain to prevent her revealing her assailants. The authorities did not submit all their evidence, reserving some for the preliminary trial.

Both Jardines took the arrest quietly, maintaining the same defiant grin they displayed when G. T. Blackstock, C.C., was denouncing them as false-finders in the witness box yesterday. In the same way they listened to Coroner Holmes charging the jury, and also to the verdict, which declared that Elizabeth Jane Anderson came to her death by having her throat cut with a sharp knife or similar instrument, and the evidence submitted pointed strongly to Edward Jardine as having committed the crime.

Five hundred people waited outside the court house to get a look at the pair as they were marched to the county jail. Edward limped along beside Inspector Greer, blushing somewhat, and smiling. Thomas followed with Inspector Boyd, sneering.

The coroner instructed the jury that if they saw fit to connect Edward Jardine with the crime they could implicate the brother as well. He laid particular stress upon the conflict of statements uttered by both of them, and also their mother, who had obviously tried to escape appearing on the stand. The only member of the Jardine family, he said, who appeared to want to tell the truth was the youngest boy, Frankie. Edward Jardine had been contradicted in every particular by several witnesses when he attempted to explain his movements on the night in question. He had also been contradicted by his relatives.

"It is for you to say," he said, "whether Edward Jardine is a liar or not. If you believe he is, you must answer this question: Why? Is it to conceal something that he didn't want to come out? If it was, then it must have been something that would have hurt him. That is only a natural conclusion. If you consider that Edward Jardine is culpable I simply wish to say that you cannot get away from the fact that Thomas Jardine was implicated in this as well. The two were together all night, they bring up their fortunes together. If the one must have been aware of the other's movements all that night, to say the least of it."

Jardine's Last Call.
Twice again this morning was Ed Jardine put on the witness stand, the last time just before the coroner began his summing up.

"Now Edward Jardine," began Mr. Blackstock, "this inquest is drawing to a close and you have had several opportunities to make explanations. You understand that you are not in the position of an accused person as yet. But you say that several of the witnesses are lying and I have called you back to give you any opportunity you may wish of making explanations. You will observe that if the jury believe their evidence, it will put you in an unfortunate position. I have called you back because I don't want to take any unfair advantage of you. What explanation have you to make?"

"I don't see how they can come up here and take hold of that Bible and kiss it and then tell lies," responded Jardine.

"Then I suppose you realize that it would be better for you to tell the truth?"

"They're lying, that's all I can make out of it," was the final word.

Previously, Blackstock asked him if he had ever been near the place where the girl's body was found and he answered "No." George Moss was then sworn and stated that a few days before the murder he had gone to the place with witness.

"I say he's lying," said Jardine.

Mr. Moss was asked how the witness walked before the tragedy as compared to now.

"Well, he wasn't as lame then as now," (laughter).

Medical Evidence.
Simeon Morningstar, who lives opposite the fair grounds, was finding a black handled knife with a broken "little" blade, inside his gate five weeks ago.

Mrs. Monck, who was working in the refreshment booth at the fair, said her little daughter Hazel had bought 15 cents worth of buns at 6.30 or 6.45 on Sept. 20 for Lizzie Anderson. The money was supplied by the Anderson girl. This was corroborated by Hazel.

This evidence had a very significant bearing on the case, as Dr. Galloway, who made the post mortem on the murdered girl, followed with the statement that the remains of buns were found in the stomach and if she ate those at 7 o'clock she must have died at eleven or before. There were also some fresh grapes in the stomach, and he inferred that they had been taken from the vines beside the abandoned house just before she entered the cellar. From spatters of blood on the stairway leading into the cellar he thought that an attempt had been made to drag the body out after the murder.

Electric Light Employees Meet.
Last evening the members of Toronto section of the National Electric Light Association were addressed by Inspector Hughes, on "Technical Education." A short program was given, in which Messrs. Rowney and Porter gave a brief outline of their trip with G. O. R. to England, and E. J. Bowers gave a banjo selection.

ROGERS FUR CO., One Door South of Richmond St. 152 Yonge St

York County and Suburbs

WEST TORONTO.

WEST TORONTO, Oct. 26.—(Special).—The contract for the lighting of West Toronto's streets expires on Nov. 1, and the civic electrical department has decided not to renew the contract. Light will still be bought from the Toronto Electric Co., however, on an indefinite contract, subject to 15 days' notice. This will cost ten cents per light per night, which is one cent dearer than the contract price. The department expects the hydro-electric will soon be in a position to light West Toronto streets, when a cheaper rate may be secured.

The old bridge across the tracks on the Weston-road, off Dundas-street, is getting more shaky every day. People walking across it can hear the timbers creak. Part of the west side of the bridge has been boarded up, and lanterns are placed there at night to prevent any accident. The bridge was put there some 25 years ago, when the C. & P. R. first came into the city, and has been neglected ever since.

Charlie Spicer, an employee of the Canada Cycle and Motor Co., was yesterday injured while unloading engines at the company's bonded warehouse last night. He was taken to the Western Hospital, in an automobile, where it was found his injuries were of a serious nature.

An anniversary social was held in St. John's Church this evening, for the women of the parish. A most enjoyable and profitable time was spent by all.

NORTH TORONTO.

NORTH TORONTO, Oct. 26.—(Special).—Larry McCann, a well-known local character, who has spent a good deal of his life in jail, and who yesterday completed a two-year term in the Central Prison, was this forenoon again placed under arrest by Chief Constable and Constable Longstreet. McCann, who had in some way secured enough money to buy a few drinks, ran foul of John Zeiman of Davilleville, a badly cut eye and other minor injuries. McCann will come before Magistrate Ramden in the morning. The board of works and one or two other committees will meet to-morrow night.

Mayor Brown will, it is understood, have a conference with the board of control of the city to-morrow morning regarding the extension of street car lines and railway matters generally, the talk is only expected to be informal and along educative lines.
