ON PARLIAMENT HILL

OTAWA, Feb. 27.—(Special.)—The budget debate occupied three days this week, and is to be resumed on Tuesday. It has served a purpose in so far as it has given an extensive appearance of devotion to public business, but the real interest has been centred upon what is going on outside of the chamber. More than once during the week the bare score of members necessary for a quorum have been in their seats, and the budget bill has been discussed, but the budget itself has been under somewhat depressing circumstances. The Liberals were evident in holding back, and the government supporters merely kept in the trenches. It is currently rumored that the opposition will force the fighting later on, and Mr. Pugsley who can always be relied upon to start something, will be on the firing line when the debate resumes next Tuesday or Friday, when he was at his office in the East Block. From that circumstance it was argued that dissensions among his supporters, and even among his cabinet colleagues had been his quality of patience to the snuffing point.

It is recalled that in the old days when Sir Robert led the opposition he more than once engaged himself temporarily, and frankly appealed to his followers to adjust their differences and work out their own salvation. However, in the end of the situation, some way adjusted itself, and in time came the reciprocity issue and the great victory of 1911.

Just now there seems to be in evidence another struggle. Echoes of it came to us from the Conservative caucus at the opening of the session. What transpired is almost as well known as the fact that a number of government supporters fiercely attacked the minister of militia, voicing personal dislike of Aeneas, got up a little steam the other night, when goaded by Bradbury, of Selkirk, he announced that the opposition was ready to go to the country. A. K. MacLean and Kyle, of Nova Scotia, were more pacific. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has taken no part in the debate as yet, and no issue will be put forward to divide the house on party lines, at least for the present.

YET, if the elections were to come this summer they would be more sharply contested than many anticipated. The Liberals will develop great strength in the Province of Quebec. The bilingual school situation in Ontario is bringing about a solidarity of sentiment among the French Canadians, which is not without significance. If Sir Lomer Gouin, the premier of Quebec, decides to enter federal politics as the first lieutenant of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it is believed by many that he can deliver fifty seats from the Province of Quebec, some Quebec Conservatives say fifty-five. Sir Lomer Gouin, must be remembered, has always commanded a substantial support from wealthy and influential Conservatives. He will probably have the Graham newspapers behind him, and will probably get a campaign help from the Montreal "Tribune's" franchise, which would bulk big and effective.

In short, if the elections were held this summer, with Sir Lomer in charge, it is a fair surmise that the Liberal majority in Quebec might almost equal the Conservative majority in Ontario.

THE government may solve the problem of giving a vote to Canadian soldiers at the front. Those who see something grotesque in soldiers casting ballots in the trenches forget that northern soldiers voted at the front during the American civil war; but, apart from that, it would be quite feasible to declare every enlisted man an elector and permit him to send a power of attorney to his father, brother or friend at home who would then vote for him on election day.

The most important business transaction in this world are conducted every day by attorneys in fact, although their principals may continuously reside overseas. When a big corporation holds its annual meeting perhaps only twenty shareholders out of twenty thousand are actually present, and nearly every shareholder actually takes part in the election. A power of attorney could no doubt be utilized so as to enable the soldier in the trenches to participate in the election as he were still at home.

The first prize was won by Mrs. Butler and Mr. Downer, the second prize by Mrs. Dickenson and Mr. Teague, and the third prize by Mrs. Conger and Mr. Eagle. Lunch was followed by dancing and a couple of exhibition dances were given by Mr. and Mrs. Mosher of the Mosher Institute.

CARRIE DAVIES IS NOT GUILTY

struggle in behalf of the same principles which were involved. "You can make a parallel," he declared, "between the soldier in the trenches and the girl in her humble domestic capacity. It is no more murder or malice than it is for our brave troops to defend the honor of the empire they are so splendidly doing at the front. Her object was not to exterminate her master but to protect herself against a fate that she felt would be worse than death."

The Crown Summary. For the crown, Mr. DuVernet directed the attention of the jury to what the law stood for, and he declared that it was Carrie Davies duty if Massey had made an assault on her to report the fact to the proper authorities and lay a charge against him. By her own words to her brother-in-law, when she said she thought Mr. Massey had been drinking and "he would feel like two cents tomorrow," he endeavored to show that fear did not exist in her mind, as she had made out in her story. He said that her self-possession on the stand did not show any remorse for taking a man's life. The case was a serious one and must be regarded in a serious way. It was for the jury to maintain the right of the law in the community.

NOVEL BEDROOM OF CHICAGO MAN

Folding Couch in Packard Tonneau Gives Repose in Hot Weather.

A pajamaed, slippers figure may be seen almost any night slipping out of one of Chicago's South Side residences, and skipping lightly into a waiting motor car, as soon as summer's heat begins improving its grasping hooks into the city.

Aladdin and Company are still incorporated and doing unlimited business. C. S. MacDonald, 2222 Calumet avenue, Chicago, it seems, is junior partner of the concern. Since buying a Packard "4-48" in 1912, he has been rubbing the lamp diligently with remarkable results, so that now when the night is sultry and there's no sign of a lake breeze and soda fountains are sizzling overtime and other folk sit gasping on the stoop trying to make up their minds to lurch into baking bedrooms, MacDonald does not fret. He goes to bed in the boudoir of his tonneau, and sleeps serenely, while the chauffeur drives at an even, cooling speed of twenty miles an hour out over country roads, and deposits his peripatetic master at his doorstep just in time for the morning plunge.

The stateroom into which this tonneau has been converted is roomy, and Mrs. MacDonald and the two children often accompany the owner on his cooling sleep rides.

All the comforts. In addition to folding beds, according to C. R. Lester, technical manager of the Packard Motor Car Co., interviewed at the Coliseum, this wonder-car is provided with running water, fed from an eight-gallon tank, which may be switched in with a wash basin, an ice box, folding stove, three thermos bottle racks, most of the furniture, a battery for light cooking, a mirror, showing the back stretch of the road, a headlight on the rear as well as front of the car, and a 12-gallon auxiliary gasoline tank, which may be switched in without stopping the car.

When the MacDonalds take their frequent cross-country motor jaunts, they are not obliged to depend upon hotels, their car being provided with all the comforts of home. In fine weather they cook their meals by the roadside on the collapsible stove carried on the running board, while in bad weather they pull down the curtains and prepare a pot of orange

HARD TIMES FOR THE DRINKING MAN

It is a well-known fact that during rich "horse-racing" times as the year 1914 high-class men take liquor as a stimulant or to "drive their troubles."

It is a "hard old story" with every man who does this, his system demands more and more every day to overcome the effects of the poison "stored up" in his system.

The Best Treatment, taken at home or at the NEAL INSTITUTE, 52 College St., Toronto, will eliminate the poison, restore normal conditions in a few days, drive the nature mailed in sealed envelopes, phone North 2067.
