TO LET—Two bright rooms for light housekeeping or lodgers. Good location. Nothing can be done to show disapproval of his political course, while there are many ways, particularly in China, by which further disapproval can be demonstrated to a live General.

In this country and in not a few others, prisoners of distinction always have been a source of serious embarrassment, but for reasons that probably do not exist in China unless conditions there have changed much from what they were many years ago.

But in China a captured enemy can be made to pay many large debts before being released, and the presence of vengeance are viewed with interest by his creditors. At least that used to be the case, and the present military distinction between live and dead General hints the survival of old ideas.
