PERMANENT MEMORIALS OF OUR SOLDIER DEAD

Provision is now being made by the Imperial War Graves Commission for permanent memorials to be erected on the graves in all theatres of war. These memorials will bear the regimental badge, number, rank, name and initials of the soldier, and the name of the place of the soldier, and any further particulars of his military and civilian career that may be desired.

When a cemetery is finally closed and ready for construction to commence, forms are sent to the next of kin asking for the text or inscription chosen for the memorial, and for the particulars required for the cemetery register.

The next of kin are asked to return these forms to the Imperial War Graves Commission in London. There are instances continually arising where the next of kin in replying to the forms sent to them and giving the information they desire recorded, ask what provision is being made to mark permanently the grave of another member of the family who is buried elsewhere.

Work of Verification

Unfortunately, owing to the vastness of the work of verification, it is impossible to send forms in respect of all such graves to the next of kin at one and the same time. Although it might appear that the grave has been overlooked, this is not the case, as another form will be sent at a later date when the cemetery where the grave in question lies is being dealt with. Nevertheless, when information is supplied by the next of kin in reference to a grave in a cemetery for which construction has not yet been commenced, the particulars are acknowledged and carefully noted for future use.

It must be recognized that a work of this nature cannot be hurriedly carried out if it is to satisfy the sentiments of the next of kin.

Each grave already recorded must be carefully maintained, and search must be made to locate as many as possible of the graves of those whose last resting place is still unregistered. From day to day, in all theatres of war, new figures are being located, single graves and small groups are gradually being concentrated in the nearest main cemetery with all due care and reverence.

The completion of the work undertaken by the commission will be greatly facilitated if the next of kin will co-operate in the task of verification by returning the forms with as little delay as possible, remembering that delay in information regarding one grave, may seriously impede the construction and completion of a cemetery.
