PLAYED DETECTIVE AND RECOVERED BRACELET

"Pink Lady" Had Picked it up on a Ball Room Floor and Was Wearing it

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Pierre Chouteau Scott lost her costly diamond bracelet just before entering the Vendue Prophet's ballroom of the Mardi Gras celebration here, and had almost given up hope of recovering it when her guest, Mrs. A. D. Plamondon, of Chicago, started in quest of the "Pink Lady." For half an hour Mrs. Plamondon, a member of a family prominent in Chicago society, went through the crowded ball room seeking the "Pink Lady" who, two hours before, she had seen picking up a bracelet from the cloak room floor. She had not noticed that Mrs. Scott did not notice the loss until just before midnight. After a search which wasted her more than all the social exertions of the evening, Mrs. Plamondon found the "Pink Lady" and recovered the bracelet.

Butter That's Sweet In the goat line won't do to spread bread with. For cooking pastry, pan cakes and bread, you want Butter that's strong enough to argue with you, or do stunts you can get elsewhere, but not here. Try ours and smile and be happy. Our eggs are all strictly fresh. ST. JOHN CREAMERY 92 King Street.

Then, said Mrs. Plamondon "that must have been your bracelet that I saw a woman carrying away. If she's in the ballroom I'll find her." Mrs. Scott tried to dissuade her, saying it would be useless because of the number of women present. "I'd know that pink gown anywhere," said her guest. And she set out, escorted by her husband, for an inspection of the ballroom, scrutinizing every pink costume. Just as she was about to give up the search she saw the gown she was looking for and saw also the missing bracelet on the wrist of the gown's wearer. Mrs. Plamondon stepped to the woman's side and a moment's conversation, hardly noticed by those standing near, sufficed for the recovery of the lost article. No man is truly great unless he is able to convince his neighbors that he is.

La MARQUISE de FONTENOY A Mission and Its Meaning — Remarkable Revelations About the Royal Tragedy in Serbia are Made

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company) There has been so much comment and question on both sides of the Atlantic with reference to the action of the French Government in sending to Claude Casimir-Perier an official mission in the United States, while at the same time the French cabinet ministers are so busy with their own affairs, that it may be as well to explain the reasons for this mission. It is not a mission of condolence, but a mission of sympathy and support. The French cabinet ministers are so busy with their own affairs, that it may be as well to explain the reasons for this mission. It is not a mission of condolence, but a mission of sympathy and support.

Still less difficult is made by the cabinet ministers in entrusting a friend or acquaintance with an official mission abroad, when he does not receive any remuneration or even expenses, and offers to defray the entire cost of his trip himself. This was the case with the young Frenchman who now styles himself the Comte de Perigny, who is a familiar figure in New York society, and who was much of his acceptance on this side of the water to the fact that he obtained from a French cabinet minister the same kind of report on conditions in Central America. It is an unpaid mission of this sort that has been confided to Claude Casimir-Perier, in spite of his many legal difficulties, both with his family and with his creditors in Paris—troubles which are of a sensational nature, and which attracted all the more attention and regret from the fact that he is the son of the late President Casimir-Perier, who preferred to resign the chief magistracy of the French Republic, and who was forced by the cabinet of the day and which he did not consider consistent with his notions of honor.

Remarkable Revelations From the revelations now being published at Belgrade by the Navokovitch, who was one of the leaders of the conspiracy that brought about the death of King Alexander and Queen Draga, the accession of King Peter to his throne, it would appear that the regicides, when they reached the palace at Belgrade on the night of the tragedy, had with them a considerable quantity of chloroform with which they proposed to render the ill-fated monarch and his consort unconscious, and then to carry them off in that condition to a country house belonging to Navokovitch, in the neighborhood of Belgrade and standing a considerable distance from any other habitation, in the midst of extensive vineyards. They were to be kept there under the influence of an anæsthetic, until after Peter Karageorgievitch had been proclaimed king; and it was only after Peter was definitely installed as ruler that it was to be decided whether they were to be detained as prisoners, expelled from the country, or quietly executed. The large bottle of chloroform on the night of the murder was carried by one of the conspirators named Guerchich.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"Well, I would like to know what became of that quarter I just gave away," I heard a man say the other day. "The poor devil I gave it to may have wanted it for a drink, or he may have more money than I have, but what can you do when a man says he's starving? I'd rather help ten men who didn't deserve it, than refuse one who was really hungry." I think the quandary in which this man found himself is a very common one. I don't believe there is anyone who goes about much, but has often been asked for money to buy food with, and has wondered, as he gave it, if it would really be used for that purpose.

Wherefore, I want to tell you of the man-who-thinks-a-solution of this quandary. From the Salvation Army in the city in which he lives, he procured a number of tickets, some good for a full meal and some for a night's lodging at the Army's headquarters. When anyone asks him for money for food or lodging, he gives him one of these tickets. If the supplicant is really hungry, he presents the ticket and receives the meal or the lodging. At the end of each month, the man-who-thinks settles with the Salvation Army for all the tickets marked with his special number, which have been presented. In this way, he is sure of never turning away anyone who really wants food, and at the same time of not giving money to professional beggars.

My Dear Miss Cameron— "Will you please, some time, write one of your little articles on the subject of a man taking a woman's arm when on the street, coming home from the theatre and so on? When the lady is old or there is a crowd, or it is raining, or the couple are engaged, it may be all right (though even then it seems to me she should take his arm); but in pleasant weather, when the man is young and well-dressed, and his arm is around the woman's waist, it seems to me to be a perfectly ordinary step. As a general thing, after a man has done it once, I refuse further invitations to go on 'till he is quite tired, and I know no way to stop it. "Seems to me a woman ought, literally, to 'set the pace'—he free to step one way or the other, as she likes, and not be obliged to follow her. "Please in your own inimitable way, write it up some time, and very much obliged. "One Who Uttersly Agrees With Miss Cameron."
