IT IS AN ANNEXATION VICTORY.

The St. John Globe is greatly pleased at the victory of the Nova Scotia government in the recent election; so is the St. John Telegraph. The Moncton Transcript is also much elated. These rejoicings are perhaps natural, for the Nova Scotia government calls itself liberal, and the three papers we have named are also classed as Liberal. But why should the United States papers also rejoice over an event which does not appear to concern them very much? Why should we told in the headlines of a despatch in the Boston Herald that Nova Scotia is moving towards annexation? This despatch which was sent from Ottawa to that paper states that Sir. John A. Macdonald and several members of the Dominion cabinet had up to the time of the election predicted the downfall of the Fielding administration, from the fact that the election was contested on a platform whose chief plank was unrestricted reciprocity —or closer commercial relations with the United States. The correspondent adds that it may be said the government, who were returned to power in Nova Scotia, were charged with holding strong annexationist views, which was persistently used against them in the late campaign. "There is no province in the Dominion," continues this writer, "where provincial politics are so closely identified with the party lines of the Dominion Parliament as those of Nova Scotia. It is not surprising, therefore, that Sir. John and his cabinet were greatly alarmed at the result of the election. There is a significance that attaches to it which unmistakably points to the revolution which has taken place in that province as regards the great issue in the Dominion politics of the day —closer relations with the United States in one form or another. There is one point that cannot be lost sight of as a result of the late contest, and that is the fact that the leading commercial economists, Hon. Mr. Langley, attorney-general, has not only been endorsed, but has been returned by an overwhelming majority." In addition to this we have the same despatch a quotation from a prominent politician, who once held a seat in the Dominion government, and who is stated to have said:—"This is the beginning of the end as regards the fate of the Dominion Government at the next general elections, a forerunner, and it leaves no room for doubt that the people of Canada recognize the fact that the interests of the Dominion are identical with those of the United States."

It will be news to the people of Nova Scotia that unrestricted reciprocity was the principal issue on which the recent election was run, and not many of them will like to be told that their province is drifting to annexation. It is well known that the Fielding government, by throwing overboard their repeal policy and in other ways seeking to bring themselves in line with the loyal sentiment of Canada sought to minimize the effect of their former utterances, but the fact remains that the men who were returned to power in that province had a bad character politically, and represented whatever was disloyal and objectionable in Nova Scotia. This suffices to enable the correspondents of the American press to build upon their triumph a fabric of falsehood in regard to the position of Canada toward annexation. The moral of all this is that only men whose loyalty to our country and flag is unquestioned should receive the support of the electors.

THE FISHERMEN'S RETURN.

The fishermen who left town on Friday night and Saturday morning have been returning to-day by "twos and threes and larger companies," rod and basket in hand and full of fairy tales in regard to their exploits with the fly on the 24th; of course none of these good men fished on Sunday. So far as complexion goes these amateurs have nothing more to desire; they looked bronzed and hardy; the sun has tanned their necks a beautiful brown; the skin is beginning to peel off their noses; their hands resemble those of a Malay. There is no doubt whatever that they have looked upon the pools in which the fish do lie, but various stories are told of the success they met with in their quest for the wary trout. There is no denying the fact that, for the most part, their baskets had a light and empty look, but that might have been due to a scarcity of provisions in the country rendering it necessary for them to eat their own catch. One of a party of thirteen who threw the fly in the turbid waters of the Nerepis was unable to say whether the total catch of the party aggregated as many as thirteen fish or not. Still thirteen is an unlucky number and other parties may have done better. The fact that the water was high in the streams was of course the stock excuse of those who were candid enough to admit that they had caught nothing. They found the streams full of fish and they left them there. Still the mere catching of fish is the smallest part of a fishermen's sport. A day on the streams, even when the fish decline to bite may be rendered very enjoyable, providing always the provisions and liquors hold out. Besides there is no law against a fisherman who has whipped a stream unsuccessfully for hours, giving free rein to his imagination and revelling in enormous catches of mythical trout when he comes to face his friends. Even the most rigid moralists have been known to lose a little of their virtue after a long day's fishing which yielded no return, for human nature is very weak and the temptation to appear as a hero is strong. We trust that all the readers of THE GAZETTE got something for their trouble and toil on the streams, and if any of them has a good fish story to tell we will be happy to hear it.

LAST NIGHT'S MURDER.

The people of St. John, was startled to hear that during the still hours of the night a murder had been committed. Neither the victim nor the slayers move in a very high circle of society, but that does not alter the circumstances that a heinous crime has been committed, and that the prompt action of the law is necessary to deter others from like offences.

The principal importance that attaches to the murder is the fact that it is the first serious crime with which our new chief of police has had to deal; and the prompt manner in which he acted has proved that no mistake was made in placing Mr. Clark at the head of our police department. After committing the crime, the man who thrust the knife into the body of the victim, and his companion made their escape, and to all appearance remained in hiding during the night, and when they attempted to escape in the morning they were captured just within the city limits by officers stationed at the Suspension bridge by the chief of police. Had they got out of the city it would have required both time and money to capture the alleged criminals.

It is to be hoped that the wheels of justice will not be allowed to clog, but that the supposed guilty parties will be put on trial at the present circuit of the supreme court and if found guilty punished according to their deserts. There is no greater determent of crime than the speedy punishment of guilty parties, and the present is a case demanding prompt, energetic action.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Fredericton had its first real taste of the effects of closing the hotels on the Queen's birthday. Under ordinary circumstances many strangers from St. John and elsewhere would have been in that city, but as it turned out the visitors were very few, hardly any persons going there except those who had friends or relations with whom they could stay.

The St. John correspondent of the Toronto Empire wires that paper that some feeling has been excited by the displacement of Hon. A. Harrison as president of the Executive Council to make room for Mr. McLellan, late provincial secretary. If there has been any excitement over this matter it must have been confined to the county of Sunbury, for there has been no trace of it in St. John.

The Moncton jail-bird Hawke has this to say in regard to THE GAZETTE'S comments on the Nova Scotia elections.'—

Does THE GAZETTE mean to say that the electors of Nova Scotia are so unintelligent that they cannot discern the real political issues involved, or does it admit that they are overwhelmingly in favor of annexation—which it professes to believe is the Liberal aim? Neither contention is creditable to a respectable newspaper. The truth is, the people of Nova Scotia, are overwhelmingly loyal to British traditions and alliance, and so too are the Liberal leaders. Here and there, an annexationist may be found, but such a person is as likely to be found, in the Conservative as in the Liberal ranks. The Nova Scotia Liberals are more attached to British traditions, than the Tory journalists, who parading a lip loyalty, are as ready tomorrow to skip to the United States, now, if the financial consideration be there, as they were in 1866. If the people of Nova Scotia are overwhelmingly loyal, as we believe them to be, they should have known better than to sustain a government which has for its attorney general such a man as annexationist Longley. Perhaps Hawke might now explain whether he has himself become a loyal man as he has a Christian.

MRS. FLACK GETS ALIMONY.

The Notorious Ex-Sheriff's Divorce Suit Finally Settled.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The trial of the suit of Mrs. Mary E. Flack, for absolute divorce from James A. Flack was practically finished before Judge Beach, in the supreme court, special term, to-day, although the testimony of Mrs. Flack remains to be taken to-morrow at her home, 425 East Fifty-seventh street, by Referee Warren W. Foster. Neither plaintiff nor defendant were in court. A few city politicians were in the room, but it was not crowded. The only witness called was Samuel H. Smith, who had been of the two households on Madison avenue and West Twenty-ninth street, where the ex-sheriff had lived with Sarah H. Cherry, otherwise Mrs. Sarah T. Raymond. Smith testified that Flack and Mrs. Raymond lived together that Flack was known as Raymond, and that there was a child Edward, whowas treated as the son of both of them. Lawyer Cleveland, for Mrs. Flack, handed up a certificate of Dr. Charles H. Greening, that on May 15 Mrs. Flack was suffering from bilious intermittent fever and from nervous prostration, and that she is not yet able to leave the house. Lawyers P. B. Carpenter (for the ex-sheriff) and Cleveland consulted for over half an hour over the amount of alimony to be paid to Mrs. Flack. It was agreed that Mrs. Flack should have $25 a week, the house where she lives, at 425 East Fifty-seventh street, and two policies for $2500 each on her husband's life. These are substantially the terms on which ex-Sheriff Flack proposed to settle with Mrs. Flack before the other divorce suit.

Telegraphic Flashes.

The "Farrelly" building at Morristown, N.J. was burned this morning causing a loss of $100,000. Insurance about 70,000.

The incendiary tramps of Coolidge, New Mexico, are being pursued by men on horseback and when captured will be lynched.

A fire that was started by tramps, burned every house in Coolidge, New Mexico, on Saturday, except the railroad depot buildings and restaurant. The tramps were infuriated because the citizens made preparations to drive them away, and for three days they controlled the place.

At Fall River, yesterday, Samuel Whittles, wife and three children, John Buckley, wife and two children, George Hamer, Walter Turner, and son were crossing Watuppa Pond in a flat bottomed skiff which capsized when within twenty feet of the landing. Hamer and Turner swam ashore; the latter fainted. Hamer rescued John Buckley and Eddie Whittles and the rest of the party were drowned.

Measurements for a memorial window to be placed in St. Johns Church, Wolfville, have been sent to England. It is to be given by the children of the late Revd. John Storrs, for many years rector of Cornwallis and Horton. One of his sons, also the Revd. John Storrs, is the present rector of St. Peter's Church, Eaton Square, London.—Critic.

NEARING THE EAST.

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT FLYING ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

Enthusiasm on the Route—Bunting Flying and Crowds Cheering the Royal Party—Much Pleased with the Scenery En Route.

AGASSIZ, B. C., May 23.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught bowed his farewell to Vancouver from the platform of the Metapedia as the train rolled silently out of the yard. The ladies of the party had not yet risen, nor did they make their appearance at breakfast until Hammond was left behind. With ensigns flying gaily, the train departed from the terminus at 8.10 and flashed through Hastings five minutes later, running at thirty miles an hour. Port Moody was reached and No 11 passed at 8.30. Then the speed was increased and the royal special drew into Hammond at a signal for special orders at 9 o'clock. His Royal Highness was on the platform as soon as the train was at a standstill, commenting upon the fine scenery and chatting with the driver. No further incidents transpired in the run to Agassiz, which was made at 10.20 a. m.

YALE, B. C., May 23.—The increasing grandeur of the scenery brought every one aboard the royal special to the windows as Agassiz was left behind and the level strip of Hope was run at a mile a minute speed. Frazer River canyon won the especial admiration of their Highnesses, who manifested a lively interest in the changing scenes on the trip. The royal train reached Yale sharp on time at 11.20 a. m.

NORTH BEND, May 23, 1.10 p. m.—A brief stop was made at Yale by the royal special, and the Duke left the train and chatted with the crowd assembled at the station. As the train departed hearty cheers were given, and the Duke in acknowledgment bowed and remained upon the platform until the station was lost to sight. So much were their Highnesses delighted with the panorama of changing scenes presented after Yale was left behind, that they gave special orders to the engineer to slow down in order that they might longer enjoy the picturesque canyon. Five miles an hour was the average made for some time, and North Bend was not reached till almost 1 o'clock.

ASHCROFT, B. C., May 23.—Ashcroft was reached safely by the Royal party at 16.35. When leaving the train for a short walk at North Bend they were heard to express themselves as delighted with the scenery and climate. Ashcroft was gay with flags in honor of the passage through of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. This afternoon their special remained only a few minutes at the station, where a small crowd had collected to catch a glimpse of the Prince and the Princess. All the members of the party are standing their trip well, none of the ladies looking the slightest fatigued. The Canadian Pacific railway's arrangements for their accommodation could not have been more perfect. The entire line was patrolled in advance of the royal train, and each station where a stop was made was reached almost to the minute named on the time card.

KAMLOOPS, B. C., May 23.—The special train bearing the Duke of Connaught and party eastward arrived at Kamloops at 6.45 p. m., and after a short stay passed on to Sicamous.

SICAMOUS, B. C., May 23.—The first day of the Duke of Connaught's [illegible] trip was brought to a close at 10.30 this evening when Sicamous was reached and the train drew on to a siding, there to remain until 4 in the morning. The run from Vancouver here, 334 miles, was made in 14 hours actual time, with the most favorable weather possible for sight-seeing all the way. The Royal party were at the car windows the greater part of the day and expressed their admiration of the wonders of the Fraser Canyon and the old Cariboo road, a relic of pioneer days and engineering. At every stop made the Prince and his suite were out of the train almost as soon as the train was at a standstill, viewing every object of interest and conversing sociably with those who had gathered on the platforms to witness the arrival of the special. No demonstration in honor of the passing of the Prince was made at any station on the line, undoubtedly on account of his expressed wish that his trip should be regarded only as that of a private citizen. British colors were, however, flying at every station, and by assembling thereat the people testified their loyalty. The arrangements made by the Canadian Pacific Railway were without hitch. Section patrols preceded the train all the way to see that the track was clear, and had it not been for the expressed wish of the Prince that the run be made easily the driver would have put the party through a couple of hours sooner. All the party retired early, although a little fatigued by the first portion of their long trip. It is expected that a day will be spent at Banff, where the special arrives Sunday.

UNDER AN OLD LAW.

A Charge of Illegal Fortune-Telling Under a George II. Statute.

(Toronto Globe.)

At the General Sessions yesterday Henry Douglas, a young man of respectable appearance, was placed in the dock and pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing a gold ring and other small articles from Mrs. Hall. The jury brought in a verdict of knowingly receiving stolen property. The court was crowded when Thomas Moses, Stewart White, Thomas Edwards and Daniel Donohue were placed in the dock charged with the manslaughter of Fr. Leach, jun., on November 18, 1889. The prisoners were in the employ of the G. T. R., and had charge of a locomotive, which was backing from Little York to the Don with the tender first. At Pape's avenue crossing the locomotive ran over and killed H. Leach, a young farmer who was crossing the track at the time. Stewart White and Thomas Moses were the fireman and driver of the locomotive respectively, and Edwards and Donohue were assisting. It was alleged that the prisoners were guilty of negligence and are responsible for the death of Leach. Mr. Wallace Nesbitt appeared for the prisoners. After hearing all the evidence for the prosecution, Judge McDougall decided that there was not a particle of evidence implicating Donohue, Edwards and Moses, and he discharged them. In the case against the driver of the locomotive, Stewart, after hearing legal arguments pro and con, his Honor directed the jury to acquit the prisoner, as no guilty intent could be shown in his case. The jury acquitted the prisoner without leaving the box.

Maggie Milford, fortune teller, was arraigned for pretending to tell the fortune of Caroline J. Adams on April 11th. She pleaded not guilty. The statute under which the information was laid is an old one, dating back to the reign of William IV., and the punishment is imprisonment and standing in the pillory. The act only applied to England and Scotland. Mr. Murdoch argued on behalf of the prisoner that the statute never applied to Canada, and that the pillory part of the punishment had been repealed in the reign of George III., consequently the Crown had no case. His Honor seemed to think there was something in this contention and that fortune telling is not illegal in Canada. The old statutes in the case were hunted up, and the reading of them, in view of modern ideas, showed a wonderful spirit of change since the days of George II. The original statute says, after explaning crafty occult, witchcraft, etc.;—

"Every person so offending, being thereon lawfully convicted in that part of Great Britain called England and Scotland, shall for every offence suffer imprisonment by the space of one whole year without bail or mainprise, and to stand in the pillory." (George II., 9c, 3es.)

Eventually, in order to settle the matter of fortune telling, witchcraft and other occult sciences in Canada, the evidence was heard, and the legal part of the case is to be argued later.

Mrs. Adams, police station matron, a widow, was the first witness. She described going to 143 Shuter street and seeing Madame Milford. She extended her palm of her hand, "read her fortune" from it. There was a fair-haired man she was to beware of; she had missed receiving some money she should have received; there was a dark gentleman who would appear, and she would ultimately settle down in a small village and be very happy. Fifty cents was paid for this "glimpse into the future."

In cross-examination there was a great deal of amusement, the judge, jurymen and spectators laughing heartily at times.

The jury, after being out a little less than an hour, brought in a verdict of guilty of fortune-telling. Judge McDougall, after recording the verdict, said that there was a very important legal question in this case. Under the Statute passed in the reign of George II. fortune-telling was published by a year's imprisonment, with no option of a fine, and the culprit was to stand in the pillory every day to public view. That was the only act against fortune-telling in Canada, and the one under which the information was laid. It was asserted that the pillory part of the fact had been repealed in the reign of King William IV., but the rest of the act was in force. Did the act of George II apply to Canada? His Honor then said he would appoint a day in the near future to hear argument on this point, and in the meantime the prisoner would be allowed her liberty on her own nominal bail. A similar case concerning Mrs. Lappan was by mutual consent postponed until the Assizes.

Provincial Points.

Mr. Baird of Victoria has resigned his seat in the House of Assembly.

MR. FOSTER FARNSWORTH brought to town on Monday the skull and right thigh-bone of a boy. They were found near the spot where young Carter was last seen alive, and no doubt were a portion of his remains, as Dr. Primrose informs us that the teeth contained in the jaw-bone were those of a boy eleven years of age. The sad fate of this unfortunate youth, and which created such a sensation in our midst at the time of its occurrence still remains a great mystery, and in all probability will never be satisfactorily explained.—Bridgetown Monitor.

THEY QUAILED BEFORE WOMEN.

Noted Men Who Blushed and Were Confused in the Presence of the Opposite Sex.

From the Boston Journal.

The writer vows it for a fact that the Hon. Caleb Ching who with the exception of the Hon. Rufus Choate (par nobile fratrum) was the best man to sit and listen to he has ever been acquainted with was substantially lumb in the society of women. He either did not know how to talk to them, or he would not, and I could scarcely look in the face of one of them without blushing. He could not look them fairly in the eyes, in fact, nor could he men either, for the matter. There seemed to be an unaccountable timidity and shrinking about him as there was even about Choate himself, great man as he was.

And the way would remark, in passing, that he members, as to the latter, that one evening at one of the large hotels in Boston there was a reunion, for some purpose of its graduates of Harvard College in and about Boston, and Choate was one of the invited guests. The late brilliant, Josiah Quincy, Jr. (as he was then), presided at the table with his usual inimitable grace and piquancy. While the company were assembling the writer (then a very young man) was standing by himself in a corner, when Choate came in, with a lanky gait and his head down looking as confused as a schoolboy and, catching glimpse of the writer, he rushed eagerly toward him and, grasping his arm said substantially: "You must help me up to the committee," who were standing in the hall receiving the guests.

We had only advanced a few steps however, when Choate, being discovered, was pulled hither and thither by hosts of hands, and the writer was left again to commune with himself, or with others like him and of his own age who happened to be standing near: not, however, before he had ventured modestly to remark to Choate (for surprised he was that a man of his experience and distinction should be at all desirous of thus walking under cover, as it were. And I have stated in a previous paper how he always avoided as much as possible the eyes of men, and how when waking from his office to his house, he preferred to walk through lanes and the narrowest rather than through the most crowded streets. He was very peculiar in this particular.

I have it from authority which cannot be questioned that Mr. Cushing once at an evening party in Newburyport, attempting to make himself agreeable, it is to be presumed, said to a pretty, bright-eyed girld of 17 or 18 summers, and quite distinguished for her beauty and accomplishments in the circle of her young admirers: "Pray Miss—can you tell me how love begins?" And she instantly replied, with a merry twinkle and a smile, "Why, with I of course." thus discomfiting the distinguished scholar and statesman, and getting the laugh of the bystanders upon him.

Has been backward but R. D. McA. is on hand with a full and choice assortment of Vegetable
—AND—FLOWER SEEDS,
including all the latest varieties suitable for this climate. As this space is too small to enumerate all the different kinds, he will be pleased to have you call before purchasing elsewhere.

GARDENIA.
400 BBLS of the above superior oil in stock. "GARDENIA." It is very much superior to any burning oil imported and is sold by a local house whose profits arising from its sale are not carried regularly out of the country and spent in the United States. We cry for reciprocity on a large scale, let our people practise it on a small scale first. We have lots of advocates of the reciprocity system: but if you follow the practices of those loudest in their professions of local intercourse you will find room for improvement. We live on each other, and if we persist in buying our goods of houses who carry the money out of the country we will so impoverish ourselves that we will have no money left to spend. Buy "Gardenia" oil, being the only brand of oil sold whose benefits are local.
