REMEMBRANCE OF PYTHIANS

MEMORIAL DAY

Impressive Scenes at Fernhill Yesterday Afternoon, when Graves of Departed Brothers were Decorated—Over Two Hundred Members of Brotherhood Take Part.

Yesterday afternoon the Knights of Pythias both of this city and the pilgrims from Boston and different points throughout the Maritime Provinces observed Memorial Day and decorated the graves of their departed brothers at Fernhill cemetery. Those at Cedar Hill were decorated during the morning. Over two hundred knights took part and the ceremony was carried out in an impressive manner.

At two o'clock the lodges formed up in front of Castle Hill on Germain street and accompanied by St. Mary's Band and the pipe band, proceeded by way of King street, Imperial Place, down Sydney to Union, along Waterloo and on to City Road and Fernhill. In order of the procession the lodges taking part were: New Brunswick No. 1, the parent lodge of the British Empire, Chancellor Commander Max Ross; Union No. 2, Chancellor Commander G. W. Wilson; North End No. 30, Chancellor Commander Edwin Waters; Victoria Company No. 1, Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, Captain B. L. Shenard; Sympet Lodge No. 5, Union Rank Knights of Pythias, Captain Frank Poit; the visitors from Boston under Imperial Nawob, Dr. Fred Van Magness and Grand Vizier Robert Hay, D. O. K. K.

Active Supreme Master at Arms Dr. Frank A. Godsoe of this city was in charge of the whole turnout and was ably supported by William White of the St. John lodge as marshal.

In their march through the streets accompanied by the bands and the branches full of flowers the Pythians made a striking and magnificent appearance. Not a detail was lacking and it is safe to say the parade was one of the most striking seen in this city in years. The uniform ranks made an excellent appearance while the subordinate lodges in full dress and the Boston visitors in formal dress showing the memory of which will linger long with all who lined the streets.

Arriving at the cemetery gate, the marchers were supplied with lemonade before proceeding to the graves. At the graves two men were allotted to each, and on the signal planted the flowers in the form of a cross at the same time saying: "In fulfillment of the promise made at thy open grave and because we have a kindly remembrance of thee in the name of Pythian friendship we bestow these symbols."

The service was opened with the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee," followed by scripture reading by Knight J. L. Thorne. The hymn "Peace, Perfect Peace" was then sung followed by a prayer by Knight C. P. McTavish, the doxology and the benediction. Colonel James Moulson of New Brunswick Lodge and past supreme prelate, delivered the following address:

You have given me the opportunity of addressing you on this, another decoration day. As there were a number of graves to be decorated today necessarily occupying more time, it is necessary for me, in order that you may reach the city at the time planned to make my address shorter than I might make it under other conditions.

I am glad to see so many present, but sorry that some who assisted in our ceremony for many years are absent. Last year they placed flowers upon the graves of departed brothers, not thinking that they themselves would at this time occupy narrow windowless houses, but so it is. Today flowers were placed upon the green roof of the homes of all that was mortal of them.

Since last decoration day eight brother knights of the lodges in St. John gave up life's struggles, stepped out of the ranks and laid their armor down. They played their part in the great drama of life and left the stage of action.

Each time you have assembled here the speaker has had occasion to refer to the death of some who had marched under the Pythian banner and no doubt it will ever be thus. Men are constantly moving toward the end of life's journey and crossing the threshold over which all must pass to enter upon the greater, the longer life beyond.

It is not my purpose to eulogize or condemn those who are gone. If any had faults you permitted to throw over them the veil of fraternity, charity and love; it would be uncharitable, un-Pythian to draw the veil aside.

They had virtues you may have failed to acknowledge during their life, when your recognition of them would gladden their hearts and inspire them to attain to even higher ideals. It is useless to raise them after death has closed their eyes and sealed their ears.

True Pythianism.

Better that I use the short time at my disposal, today, in an effort to get you to consider whether or not you have practiced the teachings of Pythianism to the extent you should and could have done. Whether or not you have fulfilled all required of you by the obligations assumed.

Do you appreciate as you should the full, the true meaning of Pythian friendship? Are you cautious in word and act? Are you brave in defending right? Is your sense of justice such as to prevent a personal act or word injurious to the worthy? Do you try to do unto others as you would have others do unto you?

The teachings of Pythianism would have you practice these principles in your daily life, not only among those within the Pythian fold but with all mankind. Their practice would serve as stepping stones leading you to a higher, a better life, thus benefitting yourselves and brightening the path of many.

It is the duty of all to practice the teachings of Pythianism, but it is especially your duty to do so because of the obligations you took, obligations that require you hold aloft the highest ideals of life.

In your ranks are the young, the middle aged and those grown old in the service. There are those just entering upon young manhood's career. As they look over life's great ocean, it seems like a sea of glass, not

MRS. EVELYN NESBIT THAW AS SHE APPEARED YESTERDAY ON THE STAGE. HARRY K. THAW.

There are many here who know that beneath there are dangers that have ruined many lives and will wreck many more. If you find any going over life's ocean like an unmanned bark upon an unknown sea; if any are near the coast line without a chart or compass, be thou to them as beacon lights, guiding them aright until they reach the haven of safety. Do this, but this and the Pythian banner like Britain's flag will float over so many lands and isles of the sea that the sun will never set upon it.

You are banded together for the purpose of uniting men in bonds of friendship. If fraternal love held all men bound how beautiful this world would be; were it so, swords might be beaten into ploughshares and there would be a reign of universal peace.

You are organized that you may the better relieve distress, care for the sick and comfort the sorrowing. To all such, be as the rainbow to the storms of life, the evening beam that smiles the clouds away.

There are many costly monuments in this beautiful city of sleep; but the best monument to commemorate your memory is a life of noble deeds—a life that will inscribe upon the hearts of the people, "He lived to bless mankind."

The purpose of your coming here today is accomplished. It is an act of love to place flowers upon the graves of departed friends but it is better to pluck out the thorns that line the path of life.

In a few moments your steps will be homeward. Remember that each step will bring you nearer the end of life's journey, nearer the time when you must appear before the Great Judge of all and account for deeds done in the body. How does your account with Him stand today? So live that when the evening of life's little day is sinking into restful night you may have visions of the dawn of brighter day.

When the procession reached King Square on the return the local knights lined the sides of the road and cheered heartily as the visitors from Boston passed. They in turn were cheered when they marched past the Boston ranks.
