Henry Edward Duka, Member for Exeter, Appointed to Succeed Birrell —Asquith Says Milestone on Road to Agreement Passed Although Proposals of Lloyd-George Failed—Dillon's Motion Passed Without Division.  London, July 31—Henry Edward Duke, a bahrister and Unionist member of parliament for Exeter, was to day appointed to be the new chief secretary for Ireland in succession to Augustine Birrell. The new chief secretary will be given a seat in the cabinet. No new lord lieutenant of Ireland will be appointed to succeed Lord Wimborne, who resigned after the outbreak of the Dublin rebellion. London, July 31.—The Irish situation was again brought to the front in parliament today by a motion introduced by John Dillon, uraing the government of Ireland during the war. Premier Asquith taking up the subject today, said that he was as much a party as Mr. Lloyd George to the	ment into force now, it might be possible after the war. Ulster could be brought into the operation of the home rule bill only by coavincing her or by coercion, and if the Nationalists considered coercion undestrable they were on the same ground as the Unionist members of the cabinet. There was never any doubt that it was intended the excluded area should remain out until it was prepared to come in, said the secretary for the colonies, and the moment he understood what the Nationalists meant, he told the premier that he could agree to the retention to the Irish members in full strength in the House of Commons.  Nobody the secretary continued, could foresee the distribution of the parties after the next general election. If the Nationalists would judge all questions on their merits, he was not strongly opposed to a full Irish representation, but the Nationalists them	Infantry Cheer  As British Cavalry  Gallop Into Action  German Machine Gunners Ridden Down by Dragoon Guards and Indian Horsemen.  (By H. J. Greenwall, in London Daily Express.)  Paris, Tuesday, July 18.—Details of the fighting which led to the taking of Ovillers reached me from Northern France this evening. The struggle for the hamlet transformed into a strong fortress can be counted among the facreest and most sangularry combats of the Picardy battle.  It was a place which had been a thorn in our side, and had stopped our victorious advance which began eigh- teen days ago. Thus the importance of its capture can hardly be exaggerate ed, but although we could not carry it by assault, we have been creeping nearer and nearer, gradually throwins our tentacles round the fort, and hold- ing it in a grip of steel, For eleven days it has been en-	of our new army, which was not taught by their kind of discipline and was therefore inefficient, could not be formidable. When we followed the breach in their first line with a breach in their second, the shock of our success was accordingly the greater to their minds. For the first time German officers, who were taken, admitted that Germany was beaten, One of them, who was on his way to England and had glimpses of our reserve camps in France, said that he had been told that the British had only a fringe of troops on the front line, and once our attack was repulsed they could go through to the coast and end the war." the Nationalist leader, had been constantly informed that they were not plenipotentiaries and that the decisions reached were subjected to revision by the cabinet.  Reiterating his view that Ulster could not be brought in without her consent and that home rule, being on the statute books, could not be taken off, the premier continued that he was mostly anxious that the House should not pass away from the atmosphere engendered n the last debate. The negotiations, although they failed, hat revealed an approximation of an attitude which hardly had been expected or hoped for. A milestone on the road had been passed, and it was the patriotic dully of all to do nothing to revive ancient bitterness.  Vast Majority Loyal.  The premier admitted that the present military control in Ireland was a make-shift arrangement, but it has succeeded in maintaining peace. It was not right to say that Lord Landsdowne was responsible for the insistence in the reduction of the representatives in the imperial partiament, as all the Unionists in the cabinet had adopted the same attitude.	support whatever party backed them. The Unionist members of the cabinet were willing to allow the home rule bill to come into force now in order to get rid of the feeling of suspicion which existed in Ireland,  Mr. Bonar Law concluded by saying that he hoped from the bottom of his heart that every party in the house would remember the struggle the nation was now engaged in, and the words of Mr. Redmond and Mr. Dillon, who declared they were heart and soul in the war and would do nothing to interfere with the conduct of the war.  After a speech by John Devlin, the debate lost interest, and eventually Mr. Dillon's motion was formally agreed to without division.  SHIPPING NEWS.  MINIATURE ALMANAC. Friday's battle gave us a still firmer grip on Ovillers, but at a though we then encircled it entirely, it was necessary to quicken the action, and once more it was determined to take it by assault. I am told that north country troops were employed, the same men who had already distinguished themselves in the fighting at La Boiselle.  After a violent bombardment our lads attacked from three sides. Those who rushed from the trenches in Ovillers Woods were the first to enter the village, and at once began furious hand-to-hand fighting in the streets, which had great lumps carved out of them by our big shells. They fought the ravines—ravines not put there by nature, but by artillery—and they fought desperately in rulned houses and in cellars.  In one cellar were twenty-five Germans who had not touched a morsel of food for two days past. Just near this spot our men had to besiege a half-demolished house from which came a sustained migralleuse free. No less than France, now that we are ready, we shall give all the strangth there is in us to drive the invaders from her soil and that of Belgium. England will not achieve her fu'll strength on land, however, until next summer.  "All those who believe that our cause is the cause of civilization may rest assured that this army has no thought except to go on delivering blow after blow, until we have won that victory by force of arms which will ensure an enduring peace." At ten o'clock the village was entirely ours, and the remainder of the garrison—two officers and 124 men of the 3rd Division of the Guard—surrendered. From one end of the village to the other the ground was covered with German dead who had suffered terribly from our bombardment. The enemy losses must have been most terrible. Now the new army rashad its first practical experience in attack on a large scale."  After his $1:32 were made and the order was given to advance on July 1, he could only await news of the results in this quiet room, with its at atmosphere of detachment. There was no change in his imperturbability in the half hour's suspense before the first definite information arrived out of the mantle of smoke and confusion into which the infantry charged over a six it can mile front.  When night came he listened to the reports of his subordiantes, made plans for tomorrow, and gave directions of customary bravity, and sometimes with pithy homily.
