

FROM ALL OVER THE MARITIME PROVINCES

Saturday, Sept. 24.

With the end of September comes the annual shifting of social scenes. Already numbers of summer cottages are closed, the occupants of which are now settled in their town homes for the winter. This fact is apparent on the streets and in the shops, where the faces familiar during the season are again recognized and where the greetings of friends, separated during the summer, may be heard.

Now that the season at the summer resorts is practically over, society is turning its attention to out-of-door sports. Although both golf and tennis teas are still being given, the fact that the migration from country to town has not yet been completed may account for this, as hostesses are no doubt more concerned with household matters than with matters of entertainment at the present moment.
