

"History of New France," has given a lively account of the life led by the settlers. All was flourishing, when De

Monts lost his monopoly of the fur trade. Without it he could not afford to support the colonists, so they were suddenly obliged to leave Port Royal.