APRIL 20, 1907.

by giving your life to help others. Yes, the priest said so. That's the way to be a martyr. I wonder were any mar tyrs ever frozen to death ?' Then he would start up, "Granny! Granny! give back Father ---- 's quarter. Mind, I only borrowed it. Give it back to him."

Yes, darlin," said Granny coming in, "I'll give it back to r . He's here himself. Lie still, honey. Oh, oor boy." Villie," I said, "do you know me ?"

"Wille," I said, "do you know md?" "Wille," I said, "do you know md?" The big brown eyes opened, but there was no sign of recognition. A nurse came in just then, and I re-quested her to begin at once to com-ply with the doctor's directions. I sat in the next room and opened my brevi-ary. I could not leave Willie. I felt sure I would be needed. An hour passed. Granny was with the nurse, and I sat by the window thinking and trying to read my office, and watching the glory of the red sunset that winter afternoon. There was snow on the the giory of the red subset that winter afternoon. There was snow on the smoke - stained roof, and the muddy river visible beyond the bridge was filled with ice cakes. The foundries and glass-houses belched forth flame and smoke, but the red subset trans-formed it all into a glow of origona glad yon came." I motioned them to leave, and I heard Willie's confession. He wanted to re-ceive Holy Communion. So I left and returned soon with the Blessed Sacra-ment and the holy oils. He received Holy Viaticum, and I anointed him. Then he lay peaceful and quiet with his eyes closed. The door of the next room was open and long cor moson gleams his eyes closed. The door of the better room was open and long crimson gleams of light came through and lay on the white counterpane and on the pillow where the little head rested. There was utter silence except his difficult where the little head rested. There was utter silence except his diffiult breathing. The nurse moved about noiselessly. Her look at me was of one who feit that her ministrations were useless, although she smiled; at Willie. "Father," he whispered, "did Granay return your quarter ?" "That's all right, Willie. It she hasn't she will. You are going to Heaven soor, don't bother about any-thing but the thought of our Lord, whom you will soon see?" Then the thought struck me, "Willie, what did you do with the quarter I gave you?" He looked squarely into my face. "Father," he said with difficulty, "I gave it to somebody who needed it to ride in the cars more than I did; you know you told me, 'by loving others better than yourself, by giving your life to help others,' I could be a mar-tyr. Father, that night I nearly froze, I was so cold walking home, and when was so cold walking home, and when the icy air stopped my breath and the blood came, I prayed God would make me a martyr, but I only fainted." Something rose up in my throat and choked me. Here then was the secret of the money. The boy had given his car fare to somebody, had tried to walk car fare to somebody, had tried to walk home over the frozen river, and his weak lungs had given out. He was dying now from the effects of his charity. Yes, the blood-red sunset foretoid the death of the martyr. He died that night in his innocence and self-consecration. The last look of the big forem over the avelo and smoke, but the red sines of this formed it all into a glow of crimson glory. The hue of blood was on every-thing, type of martyrdom, I thought, and then came the inspiration, Is that boy a martyr? How? I must know, boy a marcy he is. The nurse called softly.

glad you came.

Father."
I went into the inner room. Willie was conscions, weak but smilling.
"I'm so glad, Father," he faltered,
"I think I am pretty slek, but I'm so Father.

vish you would g in the cold. to go to bed, till all hours, ands, and the an't have fires 1907.

of the early

said to me, nartyr." ht, although r than your.

help others. this world,

rgot the cir.

union time mination and

I had grown boy, and had ladies, who

ble clothing He was now a messenger provided him live with an

k him to her little corner

d grew fonder ne responded iving her all marmed and he still came ith some anz-ing cough. I laughed, said id it." But natly worried

ixed on me

had begun to on my mind. thought, and like a young own eyes fixed I talked of the God. ary night Will iced his cough him about tak-When he was y wind swept arly taking we When he was must take the e change ?" I id Will, feeling I left my money Il run, Father." night like this. I handed him a I'll borrow it he with a smile. said. " Good od bless you !" door. f Will for a day rew bitter coldless he had t the telephenu asked could] s poor perse ess and starter b ble home, and her apron to be treaming down. pt, " he's never

He's borrowed d it's worriting m at once. little room, and Willie, delirious, d to return the doctor ?" I said. 's the priest he's t bad today.'' elephone near by ian I knew, who

. He looked at ad began to work the next room, story out of the t left me he was ning home, and essed, she said it t last about midto the door with They found him ot far from home, m his mouth. He gave his address o pat to hed, and n put to bed, and r in the morning lirious and raved and borrowing ange, I thought, in the cars? He bitter night, but hat did he do with

THE CATHOLIC RECORD.

DOMINANT FIGURE OF THE WORLD." AN INTERESTING CHARACTER SKETCH OF that one other element—freedom. Pius X.'s health has been spiken of lately as being very precarious. This I believe to be erroneous. He is sub AN INTERESTING CHARACTER SKETCH OF before himself and whose motto is "Re-store all things in Christ." There was only one circumstance which could arouse so saint like a character-an attack on the Church - and once inadequate to the position, required unusual discrimination and executive powers, which Pius X. demonstrated.

THE POPE'S CHARITY.

On the other hand there has not been so much charity dispensed in the Vatican for years as now. One of the great joys of the Pope's new position is that he has the where withal for his charities. As patriarch of the some sometimes Venice this pleasure was sometimes denied him, as his purse was not bot-tomless; but at the Vatican much goes to the poor. The Club of St. Peter maintains in Rome seven or eight so-called kitch-

Rome seven or eight so-called kitch-ens where the poverty stricken, for a nominal sum, can get a hearty meal. The Club, finding itself on the point of a breakdown, decided to appeal to Pius X, asking cnly a small amount. The Pontif asked how much was needed by the Club the really being Clf0 where the Club, the reply being £160, where-upon he promptly sent £200, with the intimation that it might expect more ject to gout, which sometimes becomes very acute, but otherwise his health is so good that the late Dr. Luppon's THE POPE IN THE PRESENT CRISIS. The dominant figure in all the world is now Pius X, rousing the admiration of two continents in his daring deflance last prediction was that his days would outnumber those of his predecessor, who attained the age of ninety-four. oming of the powerful French republic in He's upholding the rights of the Church. upholding the rights of the Church. If one knew nothing of the man his imagination would immediately con-ceive a colossal figure like that of Julius II, the so called "Fighting Pope," ready even physically to do and dare, while what is the reality? A simple old man of quiet dignity, modest and meek, who thinks of others before himself and whose motto is "Re-Cheerfulness, calmoss and fragality must have their influence, and they are his daily food.—Boston Transcript.

AN EPISCOPAL PHILOSPHER.

GLEANINGS FROM THE PUBLIC ADDRESSES ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL OF

OF ARC BOSTON. A recent issue of the Boston Re-public contained an article reproduc-ing a number of striking passages from the public addresses of Most Rev. W. H. O'Connell which show the Archbishop-Coadjutor of Boston as a philos opher of unusual force and felicity of expression. Take, for instance, this view of the attack on the Church — and once aroused Europe and America has seen to what heights he can rise. It would, however, be totally wrong to suppose that Plus X. does not suffer under circumstances so abnormal. The day after Mgr. Montagnini's ex pulsion from France I had occasion to approach one of the intimates of the Pontiff, who said, with tears in his past : "The wisdom of ages and men long buried in the past is the torch which serves to brighten the path of present Pontiff, who said, with tears in his eyes, "I have never in my life seen such impersonal anguish. For Plus duty. Every great man, every man who has toiled, not for himself, but for the ages-for eternity-has lighted his lamp at that flame, and, dying, has bequeathed the light of his life to all X. to defy France is exactly like a father bitterly differing with his family. He thinks of nothing else, and speaks of nothing else, and being human, he cannot lock ahead sufficiently not to feel anxiety for the Church. He is bequestined the fight of his file to all men who follow. To such posterity is a debtor. How little any of us should know but for the treasury of the ages from which we freely draw. How little teel anxiety for the Church. He is resigned because it is God's will, but he cannot help being pre-occupied. He has, however, many consolations, one being the expression of loyalty and encouragement coming to him from from which we freely draw. How little the greatest among us could accomp-lish, did he rely upon his own self-made knowledge. What a pigmy that man soon becomes who refuses to grow by the study of his elders. Great ven-eration for the dead past is the only safe stepping stone to security in reaching an honorable and lasting future. Only little man are irragement. and encouragement county to make the additional of the additional and the additional addita additional additional addita additional addita additional addi reaching an honorable and lasting future. Only little men are irreverent. The conceit which ignores is as shallow as it is insolent. It crumbles as it was All who follow the politics of the Church are acquainted with the public life of the Pontiff, while few really know him in private. Pius X. came to the chair of St. Peter at a time when strict economy

Peter at a time when strict economy was necessary to carry on the compli-cated machinery of the Holy See. To be personally frugal was his custom, but to be economical in the right place and lavish on occasions, with revenues

The conceit which ignores is a sharked as it is insolent. It crumbles as it was reared, in a day, and its ruins excite, not sympathy, but scorn." And this vigorous appeal for practi-cal individual charity: "Have you lived thus long not to know that the hope of the community, of the nation, of the Church, lies in the unselfish activity for good of men like you? Are you so deaf as not to hear on all sides the cry for help that is filling our streets and our cities? A cry that all must hear, for its wail is too strong to be silenced even by the turmoil of the mart, but which few, alas ! heed, except those who have dedicated their lives to God's service in the priesthood and in the service in the priesthood and in the religious life, and their hands are all to make a comparison between them religious life, and their hands are all too few to bring all the help so sorely needed by children neglected by those who should care for them. The cry for sympathy arising from the multi-tude of those who suffer injustice. The cry in the courts for the protection of the law against the brutal force of might. The cry of the sick and ailing who have no friends to bring them a who have no friends to bring them a remedy for their ills. The cry of those who have fallen and who are spurned by the world for seeking to rise again. Is it possible that men with hearts hear all this and steel with nearts near an this and steer themselves against it? Or has the very commonness of suffering and need served only to make it appear hopeless and beyond the reach of aid? Why is it that so often the priest apintimation that it might expect more before the winter was out. In larger affairs the Pontiff is lavish on a corresponding scale. At the time of the Calabrian earthquake he sent a sum to the sufferers which must have taxed the Papal exchequer, but when the eruption of Vesuvins came, only a few months later, he again opened his hand and heart, saying in these precise words, 'I will be without food myself before these poor souls peonliar little history was finown by a number who had notich westments an old white-haired man tothered into the saority. "God forgive mo, Father," he wept, "I was the one who unknowing asked him to look for it for me. His stopped and looked, but the car camp and 1 begged him to hurry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a lipute and down in the store and the same and the same and the same and the stated him to houry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a slope the weith was at the stopped and looked, but the car camp and i begged him to hurry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a dispute begun in the stopped and looked, but the car camp and i begged him to hurry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a lipute and down into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a dispute begun in the stopped and looked, but the car camp and i begged him to hurry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a slipute begun in the stopped and looked, but the car camp and i begged him to hurry. He slip ped a coin into my hand and ran of in my nickel, until I got into the was taken in a slipute begun in the stopped and looked, but the car camp and down in the pote. Lee yrither and the pute and down in the pote. Lee yrither and the pute and down in the pote the pote. Lee yrither and the pute and down in the pote the po peals in vain for workers in the cause possess most enjoy most what they pos-sees, then you may conclude that sel-fishness is practical. But just so long as the greatest joys of life come from the moral satisfaction bigotten of the service we render to others-to our friends and to those who have ciety can be established by secular legislation. Times to tell us under which of these two regimes has the Church of England appeared to the better advantage and more commanded the failty and devotion of the entire English nation? to our friends, and to those who have no friends, to our family, to society, by deeds of kindness which lift us out "As for the national governments of our day and generation we do not see that they are so immensely im-proved on the governments of media-eval or primitive times that the flock of ourselves into the atmosphere of universal brotherhood in Christ, the world of Christian ideals, just so long world of Christian ideals, just so long will it be true that in all that consti-tutes the best of life, the unselfah man is the richest. Rich first of all in his capacity for enjyment, multi-plied again and again by the number of those to whom he brings help and happiness. That the tendency of the world around us, especially in the commercial life of a country like ours, is toward self, is recognized by all. It is undoubted, I think, that where the business instinct is uncurbed, the coldof Christ no longer needs a chief shepherd on earth to protect the French, or German, or English lambs from the political wolves in sheep's clothing, who are ever ready to take the national sheep-folds under their protecting care as did Henry and Eliza-beth and as the present Flench government wants to do, that they may fatten themselves at the expense of the sheep. business instinct is uncurbed, the cold-er and keener faculties of the mind These are true, brave words, and besides their value in clearing many honest minds from cant on the French prevail; and the only force that is situation have a further value in showing the impossibility of the pre-servation of the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace without the curbing and bridling this merciless in stinct in the idealism of religion. To the dicates of a heartless spirit of barter, whose motto is 'Get all that you can that you may live,' religion Papacy. Other minds are moving in the answers, 'When you have gotten all that you can you shall die.' Which is same direction. Dr. Charles A. Briggs the well-known Episcopalian, right? No need for me to answer here. And, indeed, if the motto of writing in the North American Re here. And, indeed, if the motio of commercialism were true, the eternal getting could only give a life absolute-ly unworth having. And it is so true that those who have tried it have at their own self respect.'

REUNION.

VIII. "Certainly," adds the Lamp, the two situations are alike enough nteresting and instructive."

the Lamp :

writing in the North American Re-view, pleads for what might be called a constitutional Papacy, and although his suggestions are not in the Catho-lic spirit they are put forward with a sincere desire for Christian unity and with a foresight of the ultimate reunion of Christendom in the only possible way, in Christ the Head of all true Christians, and in "the Pone. last fully realized it, and often too late repudiate the selfish philosophy which brought them only dross, and robbed them of all that makes life worthy—the love and gratitude of fellow-man, the respect of those around them, and true Christians, and in "the Pope, who as the successor of St Peter is the executive head of the Church."

Even the Churchman, still strongly anti-Papal is disseminating Catholic ideas through such articles as those devoted to "Organized Workers in the MOVING TOWARDS CHRISTIAN devoted to "Organized Workers in the Church," short histories of the re-vival of the religious life in An glicanism which read singularly like pages from Catholic convent annals; and Abbie Farrell Brown's sketch of her visit to the Harwice of the Const Our esteemed contemporary, the Lamp, an organ of the "Catholic Party" among the Anglicans, repro duces in its March number from the Catholic Columbian, the beautiful and pathetically suggestive picture of the Crucified Redeemer, with His closest followers, typified by monk and nun. "Are These the Enemies of France"? As a commentary. it gives that porher visit to the Hospice of the Great St. Bernard, which intended for the St. Bernard, which intended for the young people, and satisfying their curiosity about the world-famous dogs, tells as much about the heroic lives of the monks living in the ter-rible pass for their fellow creatures "Are These the Enemies of France"? As a commentary, it gives that por-tion of the address of Professor Thomas Dwight, of Harvard Uni-versity, at the great Boston indigna-tion meeting, in which he compares the present situation in France with that which confronted the Catholics of Great Britain in the time of Henry VIII. "Certainly," adds the Lamp, "the two situations are alike enough sake until their health is broken and they must go down to the valley to die. To be sure, where the school question comes up, there is a statement about Lord Halifax - a vigorous about Lord Halliax — a vigotous worker for Christian Reunion by the way—and a criticism of Bishop M'Faul of Trenton, N. J., though both gentle-men hold the same principles. The Lamp takes issue with the Church Times in its criticism of the

It is happier, however to note the increasing points of agreement. More and more are men of good will re-alizing the awful loss resulting from divisions in the Christian forces. The French Bishops for not repudiating the policy of the Vatican and its re-vamping of the old argument in favor of national churches generally. Says invisions in the Christian forces. The impulse towards regulation among our separated brethren is surely from the Spirit of God ; and His word shall not return to Him vold,—Boston Pilot.

When death, the great reconciler,

THE KIND OF BREAD that yields most nutriment with least trouble is baked from PURITY FLOUR.

Milled entirely from the very finest Western Canada Hard Wheat it makes baking a delight and tasty bread a surety. The Perfect Household Flour.

Sold Everywhere in the Great Dominion

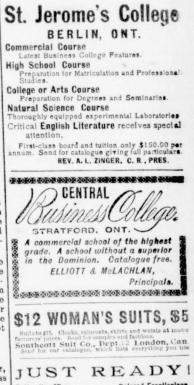

WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS CO. Limited

MILLS AT WINNIPEG, GODERICH, SHANDON

Educational.

Assumption College

SANDWICH. ONT. THE STUDIES EMBRACE THE CLASS-I ICAL and Commerci Courses, Terms, including all ordinary expenses, $180 per an-num. For full particulars apply to YERY REV, R. McBRADY, C. S. B, any money when everence. When idn't ride he said is other suit, and was raving that I quarter. Sure, if hy didn't he take hought. " I told But then the me that he might it.

e," said Granny, m senseless, with of his mouth, just ht of the door. It wailed.

tor called me and s is a case of pneuis a case of pheu-on. The hemorr-h severe. I don't ough, Father, but in an hour. I will and a nurse." that I could have think he will live,

Father ; scarcely

omfortable as pos-

and I sat down by

in his delirium, I wonder if he did ain he murmured, otter than yourself, and I begged him to hurry. He slip-ped a coin into my hand and ran off in another direction. I thought it was my nickel, until I got into the car, when I found it was a new quarter. I was terribly surprised, and ever since I could not get him out of my mind. I would have frozen to death if I had not got into the cars that night, for it not got into the cars that night, for it not got into the cars that night, for it was bitter cold, and I walk slowly. To think that I should have happened on his funeral Mass and learn that he gave up his little life for me !" And the old man wept out loud. "'Yes," I said, solemnly, for my heart was deeply moved, "he gave up his little life for you. A martyr only twelve years old."—The Rev. Richard W. Alexander in The Missionary.

TOO MANY IRISH NAMES.

Eugene Moriarty who seemed to be a fixture in the Massachusetts legislature some years ago, was at one time on the Worchester school board. A fellow member, Rev. D. C. Mears, more than hinted at one meeting that there was altogether too many Irish names on the list of Worchester teachers. The charge passed unchallenged at the time but at the next meeting up rose Mr.

Moriarty with this little gem : "Mr. President at the last meeting of the board some one intimated that of the board some one intimated that there were too many Irish names on our list of teachers. The next day I went up to the Public Library and saw Librarian Green and asked if he had a dictionary of American names. "I have," he said. "Is it complete ?" I asked. "It is, " was the answer. "Gon I take it home?"

"It is," was the answer. "Can I take it home?" "You can," he said. "Mr. President I took it home, I searched it through from cover to cover. I found no Mears in the book, but I found that Michael Moriarty was one of the bodyguards of Gen. Wash-ington."- Exchange.

The relatives at once went to law to dispute the will, but the courts upheld the Pope. Leo XIII. meanwhile fell ill and died and the case remained sus-pended. The new Pope had to be asked for a power of attorney to act for him, but the relatives of the deceased priest petitioned Pius X. who, having their financial condition thoroughly investi-gated, and finding them numerous and needy, straightway renounced the whole heredity absolutely in their favor, with the intimation, however, that a dona-tion to the poor fund would not be refused. Strangely enough, so far, the recipients of the Papal generosity have not seen fit to respond to the gent'e hint. It is suggested that perhaps they have not yet entered into possession, and that is certainly the most charitable way to look at it. DAILY ROUTINE. The routine of the daily life of the Danty for the paper. It is the cankerworm of modern methods which is eating into the very vitals of Christianity itself, gnawing at the roots of every plant destined by God to bring forth beautiful blossoms, fragrant with the odor of fraternal love. Not prac-tical, because not selfish; not practical, because ideal. Do they forget that in eat heavelies analysic every holy sentisuch heartless analysis overy holy senti-ment is reduced to ashes? It is this deification of the practical that is turning human hearts to stone. It is this destruction of the ideal which has become a blight in human life, which, as it progresses outward from the individual, attacks the family, associations, friendships, society, and even religion itself; withering the very heart DAILY ROUTINE. The routine of the daily life of the Pontiff is of the calmest. Even in these days of stress the only difference on the surface is a little less sleep, longer hours to the application of the business in hand, more and longer religion itself; withering the very heart of man, and drying up in its progress friendship, love. patriotism, and devo-tion-for all these, subjected to the alchemy of selfishness, must appear un-practical, unprofitable, and therefore realest periods of prayer, and less meditation "We have but to look around us in periods of prayer, and reasons in the second two or three audiences, after which he dines alone. The dinner consists of hardened face of the tight fuced inter-chant whose thought never reaches be-yond himself! Read it in the disinte-gration of families where it has ob-tained a shrine! Read it in the rot-tained a shrine! Read it in the rottwo or three audiences, after which he dines alone. The dinner consists of soup, fish, roast, with a vegetable, perhaps a sweet, and some fruit with good wine very abstemicusly taken, and a cup of strong, black coffee. After this comes a short nap, a visit to the garden on fost, if the season per-mits, an hour or two of reading, a few more audiences, followed by a frugal supper of bouillon, one course of meat and fruit, and the usual wine and to conversation with his familiars, in o conversation with his familiars, in which laughter is not wanting, some-stimes a game of chess, and then bed. I to cannot be said that it is all very dif-ferent from his life in Venice, it lacks

CATHOLIC RECORD, LONDON, OWL