THE TRIPLE HANDICAP

WHEN I was a kid of about thirteen And rather slow for my years, I knew a boy who in mind and mien Outdistanced all of his peers; His clothes were tidy, his hair was sleek For he brushed it morning and night;

e was equally good at Latin and Greek, And his sums were always right. His industry made him the masters' pet, His neatness the matron's joy; He never did anything wrong, and yet

He wasn't a popular boy; For his name excited a vague mistrust And his face our prejudice fanned, And we all of us felt a deep disgust Whenever we shook his hand His merits were mainly negative;

Tradition he never defied; And he certainly wasn't wont to give Offence by swagger or side; le made no claim to be bold or brave; He didn't hustle or shove: But he wasn't marked for an early grave Like those whom the high gods love. saw him stand at my last Speech Day Bowed down with many a prize,
