THE SITUATION

The Germans have commenced another withdrawal, this time in the vicinity of Messines Ridge. They made repeated but unsuccessful attempts to recapture the positions taken, and having failed, Hindenburg has evidently decided that it would be the better plan to fall back rather than suffer from the menace of the domination of said ridge by the Allies. It is now stated that the country, across which the foe is retreating is low and marshy, and in wet weather likely to be flooded, but because of a long drought a comparatively firm surface is presented, so that British pursuit will not be hampered as it would under less favorable climatic conditions. The the circumstance that in addition to advance of the British towards Lille the menace to their own freedom, and Duai will be hastened by this the blood-reeking Huns have been withdrawal.

It is safe to affirm that the views so heartily endorsed at the gathering in the Armories, are those of a vast majority of the people of this Dominion outside of those in Quebec.

The intimation comes from certain quarters that they must be placated and handled gently. In the opinion of this paper, there has been far too much of that already. Why shoult they be cajoled and pussy footed, when the outcome concerns their own great liberty under the British flag just as much as it does the rest of us. As a matter of fact, by all the laws of decency and patriotism, French Canadiams should have had an added cause for zestful action in historical structure of the state.
