THE QUEEN IS DEAD

Hark! the bells are tolling, tolling, List, the message that they bring; "England's queen has left her realm; England now proclaims a king."

Sad we waited, silent, breathless, For the message from afar; Soon it came our hearts to sadden, Our good Queen has crossed the bar.

She has left a crown behind her, But a fairer, brighter one Waits our noble queen and mother, In the land beyond the sun.

She has reached the shining city, See, the gates are open wide; She has joined her loved in Heaven, And her Saviour's by her side.

She has heard the welcome sentence, She has heard the glad "well done;" She has joined the saints in Heaven Ere the setting of the sun.

Toll the bells, oh! toll them sadly; Yet a glad note must be there, She has left this land of sorrow For a home more bright and fair.
