"DREAM STREET"

D. W. Griffith's masterful depiction of the love of two brothers, each for the other, and their love for the same girl. A love that causes them to tear at each others throat one instant—draw to each others bosom in another.

The little players live—not act—through nine reels.
Eat and drink for to-morrow out goes the light;
Sin is as important as goodly night;
For tell me neighbor, without wrong,
How could there be right?

Other Road for the West End of London.

THE TIMES IS DEAR AS WOOD, BUT FOUR TIMES AS DURABLE.

Section of St. Martin's lane is to be paved with rubber, says the London Daily Chronicle. It is an experiment, which is being carried out by Mr. E. F. Spurrell, the engineer to the Highway Board, in order to obtain comparative results with the usual wood paving. The rubber pads, a quarter of an inch in thickness, are being laid on to concrete blocks by the workmen, the complete dimensions of each being the same as a wooden block. The work will begin in a month, says Mr. Spurrell, a representative of the Daily Chronicle. The traffic in the lane is very heavy, and we shall lay a section 30 feet long. The estimated cost of the work is £2,300 for wood; but we expect to have about four times the life of wood. The paving has been done for some time, and the results are satisfactory. It is said to be a great improvement on the usual wood paving. Spurrell explained that the blocks of moulding the blocks is new; the rubber pads were fitted to metal blocks, and had not been used before.

Triumph of Agincourt.

Formation of the English at the battle of Agincourt, October 25, 1415. It is now arranged to be presented in the same contrast to the famous French columns, which were erected in the city of London, in honor of the battle. The English, under the leadership of King Henry V, defeated the French, who were commanded by King Henry VI. The battle was a decisive victory for the English, and it is considered one of the most important battles in English history. The English army was smaller than the French, but they were better trained and equipped. They used longbows and pikes, which gave them a significant advantage over the French knights. The battle was a turning point in the Hundred Years War, and it established the English as a major power in Europe.

Beaver Board is the Best of all Wall Boards

HERE IS THE PROOF:

On the outside of our Store there are two Beaver Boards which were placed there in 1912. These two Beaver Boards have been exposed to the rain, sun, wind and snow during the past ten years and are still in good condition. No mere substitute has stood such a test as this.

During the past ten years several substitutes for Beaver Board have been sold to take the place of Beaver Board, but to-day not one of these substitutes is sold, and Beaver Board holds its place as the best of all wall boards.

The back of every Beaver Board is branded with the Beaver trade mark

The Motor Anthem.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

My auto, 'tis of thee, short cut to poverty of thee I chant. I blew a pile of dough on you three years ago, now you refuse to go—no won't or can't. Through town and countryside I drove the full of pride; no shame you lacked. I loved your gaudy hue, your tires so round and new—now I feel mighty blue, the way you act. To thee, old rattlebox, came many bumps and knocks; for thee I grieve. Badly thy top is torn; frayed are thy seats and worn; the croup affects thy horn, I do believe. Thy perfume swells the breeze, while good folks choke and sneeze, as we pass by. I paid for thee a price, 'twould buy a mansion twice; now everyone yells "Ice!" I wonder why. Thy motor has the grip; thy spark plug has the pip, and woe is thine. I, too, have suffered chills, fatigue and kindred ills, trying to pay the bills since thou wert mine. Gone is my bank roll now; no more 'twould choke a cow, as once before. Yet I had the yen, so help me John—small I'd buy a car again and speed some more.—(Adapted from Bay City Motorist.)

Koon Can

NEW RIVAL TO WHIST IN LONDON.

"Koon can" has come into rivalry with whist by being judiciously argued to be a card game of skill, says the London Daily Chronicle.

It has been mentioned recently at the police court, but no one explained that its name originated in the phrase that, because of its simplicity, "any koon can play it." Incidentally that also indicates its American origin.

Christmas parties took to it in its early years because of the rollicking round-table fun it afforded; but its popularity soon waned at other seasons. It is in the same category as "Slippery Ann," also credited with a birthplace in the United States, for with each a goodly group of players is essential to diversion.

Two packs of cards shuffled together are used in "Koon can," and the aim is to be first to get rid of a hand of 10 cards, thrown down in sequence, and the like, during opportunities of discarding and revising. Players left with cards are penalized accordingly. Certainly there is scope for finesse and manoeuvre, as well as boldness.

"It is more of a rag than a game, and is not comparable as a mental relaxation with whist or auction bridge," said an authority to the Daily Chronicle representative. "In the home circle the rubber of whist remains foremost in favor, although it is being increasingly challenged by bridge and auction bridge, which are the leading club games."

Synod Decides on "Open Pulpit."

CLERGYMEN OF OTHER DENOMINATIONS IN FAVOR OF CHRISTIAN UNION WILL BE ADMITTED.

At a late hour last night the Anglican Provincial Synod adjourned until this morning, after a heavy day's work. The sessions during the day were featured with more or less strenuous debate on such subjects as the "open pulpit," and the approval of the revised Canadian Prayer Book. The first matter was finally settled in joint meeting of both Houses by leaving the "open pulpit" with the Bishop of the diocese, to admit clergymen to the pulpits of his churches, who are of such denominations as favor Christian union.

At a joint meeting of both Houses last night there was an approval for the second time of the revised Canadian Prayer Book.

Dean Shreve of Quebec submitted the report of his committee on the Archbishop's address, which proved to be of very great interest. It passed unanimously and the committee was appointed to carry out its recommendations and suggestions. With regard to that part of the address which dealt specially with education a committee was appointed to deal with the matter of religious teaching in the schools of the Maritime Provinces. In Quebec there is religious instruction in the schools.

With regard to the important matter of Church Union, a resolution was adopted accepting the resolutions of the Lambeth Conference as the basis, that conference having laid down certain principles and suggestions for Christian union.

It is likely that the Synod will prorogue to-day.—Morning Chronicle, Oct. 20.

Have You a "Lit Pig"?

Although nearly all the materials used in the making of clothes are coloured with coal-tar dyes, yet some of the wools and woollen cloths which come from the Hebrides and other Scottish islands are still tinted with purely vegetable colours.

These vegetable dyes are made from various barks, roots, and lichens, and the secrets of making them have been handed down from mother to daughter for many centuries.

In the old days every Scotch woman had her "lit-pig" or dye-crocks, and each season she collected great stores of material for colouring purposes.

A rich purple came from a lichen scraped from rocks or stone walls. This lichen is called "stane-raw," while the tree lichen is known as "wood-raw." Another lichen which produces a deep yellow is called "philmort."

Other lichens are known as "cork-ite" and "cudbear," terms so old that their origin is unknown.

For a true black, the bark of the alder-tree is used for blue, elder treated with alum. The iris root gives grey, and bracken spores a fine yellow. Another yellow comes from the bog myrtle. A well-known dye, a rich yellow, is made from heather twigs, which are boiled in a copper.

How extensive was the knowledge of dyes among the Highlanders is proved by the extraordinary variety of colours which, from very early times, they used in the tartans which distinguished the different clans.

Diamond Ring Found Among Waste Paper.

While sorting waste paper at a Salvation Army shelter, Frederick Jackson, a laborer, found an envelope with a ring in it, says the London Daily Chronicle.

When he finished work, he told the Old Street magistrate, he went to a pawnbroker's and asked the value of the ring.

"What did he say?" asked the magistrate.

"He told me to wait a minute and fetched a constable, who pinched me," replied Jackson.

The charge against Jackson was that of stealing a diamond and sapphire ring worth £20, "by finding it and not taking a proper course to discover the owner."

An assistant to Messrs. Bravington, Jewelers, Pentonville Road, said the ring had been sent to them to be re-mounted, and was put in an envelope on a tray in the shop.

The magistrate discharged Jackson, and made an order that the ring should be handed back to Messrs. Bravington.
