The Cornwall Manufacturing Company bave pleasure in intimating the complete restoration of their works at Cornwall which are now in full operation, producing large quantities of White and Grey Blank-ets, and Heavy Medium Class Tweeds. They regret, however, having again to call attention of the public to the continuance of the discountable wastice of investigaattention of the public to the continuance of the disreputable practice of importing English Blankets and selling them as Canadian. These Blankets are made largely of Shoddy and Cotton Waste, with a small percentage of pure Wool, and though sightly in appearance, closely imitating the Cornwall Blankets, and ticketed "Canadian Manufacture," have neither warm nor wear, but can be sold at a lower price than the Cornwall Blankets (which are made of Pure Wool) can be produced for.

Danies willing are factor of the wood-be produced for.

The public are cautioned agairs: this at-tempted deception, and respectfully inform-ed that the name of the CORNWALL MAN-UFACTURING COMPANY is printed on he ticket of every Blanket made by them. Cornwall, Sept. 16th 1872 dw2m

Phatter, of Killean, brought us in to-day about a bushel of the largest potatoe about a bushel of the largest potatoes we ever saw. They are partly garnet chilis and partly a kind he calls the "Apple." Several of them weigh 1½ lbs., and though of extraordinary size are solid and of good quality. Mr. McPhatter informs us that his crop of potatoes this year is splendid, and that most of the kinds above mentioned are much larger than the ordinary yield.

J. B. Armstrong & Co. have just completed another of those splendid hearse which have reflected so much credit on the establishment. It is an exact countthe establishment. It is an exact counterpart of those previously manufactured by the same firm, with the addition of some exceedingly fine and tasteful carving on the corners of the panels. Mr. John Brown, Peterboro', is the proprietor of this very handsome funeral equipage, and another has been ordered for Mr. Little, of Galt.

posit a letter in the post office on the the other side of the railway track. A locomotive was approaching, he thought he could cross before the ponderous engine could come along. He miscalculated the speed. In another mement he was a shapeless mass. Had he waited two minutes—half a minute, the train would have passed along, and he could have deposited his letter.

A young lady wished to show her friends how easily she could cross in front of a locomotive; she did cross, but her streaming dress caught in the passing wheel, drawing her back under its crushing weight.

One afternoon about sundown, a young wife was locking out of the window of her beautiful country home for the return of her young husband from the city. For the six months of their married life just past, they had been busily lixing up their country place; both were young, both were healthy; the husband was in business on his own account, with every prospect of increasing success. She saw him get out of the ears, and passed down stairs to meet him at the door; but when she reached it he was not there. She thought he was playing her a little trick; she called for him, playfully, affectionately, but there was no answer; she saw a crowd of men approach the gate, open it, come up the path, with her dead husband. He did alight from the
