The Late Dr. Jones.

The organ at the Church of St. John the Evangelist gave forth no melody at the services yesterday. It was diaped in black, and its tones were silent, as if mourning for the one who had so often touched its keys—the late Dr. Jones. The music was rendered without instrumental accompaniment. In the morning the rector, Rev. W. T. Hill, made touching allusion to the departed organist, many of the congregation being moved to tears by the reference. The beautiful hymn, "When our heads are howed with woe," one of the last which Dr. Jones had practiced with the choir, was sung with honesty, genuineness and worth. We speak of men possessing "stirling" qualities, and often apply the word when speaking of preparations of great merit and worth. Canadians of very class and rank, well knympathetic fervor.
