Curiosities of International Trade.

Last year, the United States' best customer by long odds was Great Britain, which bought $478,448,592 worth of products from our neighbors. In the same period the value of the imports into the United States from Great Britain amounted to $167,947,820.

The United States, by its high tariff wall, hopes to decrease its imports from Great Britain still further. If that is the result, then it is highly probable that Great Britain will buy a less quantity of United States products, supplying her wants from countries like Canada which are anxious to build up and not cut down trade with the greatest country of the world. Canada's trade with Great Britain showed a great increase last year. In the present year, it is advancing as it has never before done, and as time rolls by we may expect that the mother country will buy more and more of our staple products and less and less of those of the United States.

Our neighbors cannot both discourage commerce by a hostile tariff and encourage it at the same time.

One reason for the disparity between the United States imports and exports from and to Great Britain lies in the fact that Britain has so much surplus money that she has invested vast sums in United States railway and other securities, and the interest on it is paid in products. Another reason can be found in the fact that profitable trade is often carried on in a roundabout way. The United States, for example, sends wheat and corn to England. British ships carry it. To pay for it, Britain sends manufactured goods to China and Japan. British ships carry them. With these goods, tea and other commodities are bought for the United States. British ships carry these to San Francisco or Vancouver, and through these imports Britain finally liquidates her bill for the original shipment of wheat and corn.

Observe how many profits the British merchants and ship owners reap through the roundabout way that a restrictionist tariff forces trade.

The following, from the New York Sun, could never be said of the well-educated woman: "'Very nice,' said one woman of another, 'but limited. She's bounded on the north by her servants, on the south by her children, on the east by her ailments, and on the west by her clothes.'"

"The Westminster."

We have received the first amalgamated number of the two newspapers, "The Canada Presbyterian" and "The Westminster," which will hereafter appear under the latter title—it having been wisely thought convenient, euphonious, and historical, while in no sense restrictive. The general idea is somewhat that of Lyman Abbott's "Outlook," of New York—publishing weekly, with one of the issues each month larger and more fully illustrated. The "Canada Presbyterian," under Mr. Blackett Robinson, its founder, had secured a valuable circulation in every part of the Dominion. "The Westminster" had also made itself widely known. The result of the amalagamation is a magnificent combined circulation, and perhaps the most influential clientage enjoyed by any such journal in the Dominion. The editor-in-chief of the now strengthened "Westminster" is the Rev. J. A. Macdonald, an energetic and thoroughly up-to-date journalist, with a keen development alike of the nose for news and of the literary instinct. The consolidated journal will be a great success in every respect, and from the start. The Christian public, the Presbyterian Church, and Canada are each to be congratulated.

The Westminster says that "From Far Formosa" has been translated into Japanese, and is attracting a great deal of attention in Japan. Dr. Mackay says the reproduction of the plates is fairly satisfactory.

Firearms on the Klondike.

One regulation that the new commissioner of the Yukon should insist on most strenuously is that no person shall go into the Canadian gold mining region carrying revolvers or other concealed weapons. In every new mining camp the temptations to lawlessness are great. All sorts and conditions of men drift into such a place, and the tendency is to a free use of firearms in case of disputes. Where justice is asserted, as it is on the Klondike, where all are given a fair chance in the eyes of the law, and where property is safe, there is no necessity for miners going armed, while there is always grave danger from such a condition of affairs. Better keep all on an equality, and by prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons, restrain temptation.

Major Walsh, we believe, will in this respect do his full duty.

Great Britain continues mistress of the seas by a large majority. According to the report made to the state department of the United States government by Vice-Consul-General Ethelbert Watts, stationed at Cairo, only one merchant ship flying the flag of the neighboring republic passed through the Suez Canal during the first seven months of this year, and that was a small craft. During the same period 1,009 British ships passed through the canal, 161 German ships, 106 Dutch and 101 French.

Canada First.

Our city contemporary, the Free Press, we are glad to observe, is resolved that it shall not be ranked among those who try to make strife out of every little difficulty between Canada and the United States, It says:

"The Washington government has promptly corrected a grievance existing at Dyea in the matter of customs discrimination against Canadians bound for the Klondike. The port of entry at Dyea has been extended so as to include Skaguay, at the request of the Canadian authorities. The American people and the regular officials are all right. If it were not for the shirt-sleeve politicians, there need be little trouble on the frontier or elsewhere."

The Free Press apparently does not know that in making this declaration it is earning the disapproval of the Toronto World, which has rebuked The Advertiser for expressing similar sentiments, and condemning those journals, on both sides of the border, which delight in stirring up international strife. When it is considered that last year this country did $100,000,000 worth of trade with the people of the United States, and will continue to have many dealings with the republic, despite the high tariff walls erected on our border, it surely is not wisdom to foment discord between the two peoples. We in Canada cannot control the United States incendiaries, who in the press and on the platform try to make bad blood between the two countries. But we can surely maintain our self-respect as a people without needlessly nagging at and baiting those who, by their tariff laws, say they want to do no business with us that they can avoid.

Every now and again, when any friction arises between this country and the United States, a section of our press and people cry aloud, "Retaliate!" and follow the bad example of a section of the United States people by making foolish threats and ugly denunciations.

For our part, we believe that Canadian action, Canadian legislation, should have reference solely to Canadian interests. All that we should consider is the good of Canada. This was our view at a time that reciprocity with our neighbors seemed a possibility, and we honestly worked to secure it. This is our view now that our neighbors, by their legislation, have shown that they will not consent to reciprocity, and our government has taken the most advanced step in favor of promoting trade between Great Britain and Canada that has ever been devised by statesmen.

Canada first is our motto, no matter from what direction the opportunity to advance our country's interests comes.

Wearing a green shirt is the latest fashionable fad in New York. What next?

Canada's Progress.

Mr. John A. Cooper, editor of the Canadian Magazine, in a recent number gives a statement of the progress of Canada during the Victorian era, or rather of the provinces now united under the Dominion of that name. In 1837 there were five disjointed provinces, with an area of some 500,000 square miles and a population of about 1,400,000. Now there is a united Canada, including these, and extending form ocean to ocean, with an area of 3,315,647 square miles, and a population of over 5,100,000. In 1867 Canada was a few isolated colonies. Now it is a nation, united in patriotic endeavor to build up a great country from its boundless natural resources. The total foreign trade of the colonies, now in Canada, was in 1837 about $29,000,000. In 1893 it was $246,000,000. The figures given for the exports in 1837 and 1895 respectively are as follows:

The railway mileage has increased from 15 miles in 1837 to 15,977 miles in 1895. There is every indication that in the new era upon which the country has entered, Canada's progress and prosperity will be greatly augmented.

Harper's Magazine for September opens with Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's account of a bicycle trip around London, Mrs. Pennell telling the story, Mr. Pennell illustrating it; Sir Lewis Morris, on his way to this country to read his poems, affords a poem "The Coming of the Muse"; Frederic Remington writes and illustrates a story, "The Great Medicine Horse"; there are articles by the late W. Hamilton Gibson, James Barnes, jun., Henry James, W. G. Van Tassel Sutphen; a "Twentieth Century Outlook," by Capt. Mahan; an account of a trip to Samoa; by John Harrison Wagner; stories by John Fox, jun., and Frank Stockton, and other articles of interest and importance.

A PROPHECY.

COMPARATIVE DISTANCES.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Some people will think before very long that it is a good deal farther from Alaska here than it is from here to Alaska.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

[Stratford Beacon.]

Mr. Magwood, M.P.P., prates a great deal about the Model Farm and model farming, but fails lamentably in practicing what he preaches. Hon. Thos. Ballantyne has for years preached high-class dairying and has practiced it as well. Witness his Black Creek factory, which is pronounced by the dairy press to be the model factory of the continent, and the product of which always brings the highest market price in Great Britain. Compare Mr. Magwood's farm with Mr. Ballantyne's cheese factory and you can form a very accurate estimate of the abilities of the two men.

HEADS UP, GENTLEMEN!

[New York Herald.]

Very few wheelmen will object to the rule passed by the district commissioners requiring all cyclists in the streets of Washington to ride with the head erect. On the score of appearance, health and safety, it might be well to incorporate a similar regulation in the rules of the road for New York. Let the ram's horn handle bar and the accompanying "monkey back" go!

NAGGING MEN.

[New York World.]

A few months ago Dr. Cyrus Edson wrote in the North American Review some articles on "Nagging Women." He related his experience as a physician, and declared that a large share of human misery was clearly the result of women's pestilent and persistent "nagging" of those about them.

But what about "nagging" men? There are men whose nightly return to their homes always means needless misery to their households. They find fault with their dinners, with the household bills, with the children, and with everything else. They make sarcastic remarks that burn and scarify the sensitive souls of their wives. They carry home the worries of business. They "take it out" of their families for everything that has gone wrong in their day's work, and some are even cowards enough to revenge upon the innocent and helpless those wrongs and affronts which they have not had courage enough to resist and resent upon the offender.

Dr. Edson declared that the disposition to "nag" in women is clearly disease. In men it is almost always the venting of a mean and cowardly disposition where it is safe to vent it.

There are probably as many "nagging" men as "nagging" women in the world, and there is imeasurably less excuse for them. For men have the relief of work and out-of-door life for irritable nerves, and that is denied to most women. Men's lives have variety where women know only monotony.

"Nagging" in men and women alike is a sign of weakness, both moral and intellectual. In men it means a wretched cowardice as well.

THE SEA SERPENT

Seen by an Essex Lady in Lake St. Clair.

Windsor, Aug. 24.—Miss Ella Burdick, of Essex, has seen the "sea serpent" that haunts the waters of Lake St. Clair. She was out with some friends fishing one day last week, when "a dark, peculiar-looking object" was seen coming up the lake.

Of course they rowed up as close as they could and got a good look at it. It had the head of a dog, with huge eyes protruding and tusks projecting on each side of the head. Its body was seven or eight feet under water and little could be seen of it.

John O'Brien, who died recently at Newmarket, Ireland, was 108 years old.

CHARLOTTE SMITH

Has a New Scheme to Compel Batchelors to Marry.

New York, Aug. 23.—Charlotte Smith, president of the Women's Rescue League, called on the Central Labor Union to explain her new scheme for compelling marriageable bachelors to marry. She said she had statistics to show that there was an intimate connection between her scheme and the labor question. The great competition of women in the field of labor, she held, was because 60 per cent of the men refused to marry.

She said she was going to Boston to start a campaign against the Republican and Democratic candidates for mayor there, because both of them are bachelors. She did not believe that a bachelor ought to hold an elective office because no man could possibly act on questions of public morality unless he was married. Even if all the bachelors in Greater New York were to marry there would be still 100,000 women without husbands.

It is reported from Boston that Mr. Curtis, the Republican candidate for mayor of that city, has already announced his engagement to a young woman.

FATAL MOSQUITO BITES.

Cause the Death of One Child—Others Seriously Ill.

New York, Aug. 24.—The northern part of Hudson county, New Jersey, this year, suffered more than ever from mosquitoes, but it was not until Sunday that their bite resulted fatally.

Otto Miller, eighteen months old, whose parents live on the Hackensack plank road, Weehawken, was bitten on the cheek. An abscess formed, and a week later cerebro-spinal meningitis developed. Dr. Stillwagen thinks the child's brain was affected as a result of the bite. The baby died in convulsions, after being sick for two weeks.

A daughter, eight years old, of Mr. Coles, of Hudson avenue, Union Hill, was bitten on the cheek. Her face became so swollen that one eye was completely closed, and the other partly. The girl suffered great agony, and was under treatment five days.

Mr. Roach, of Hawxhurst Park, Weehawken, has a boy, three years old, who was bitten on the leg several days ago. Blood poisoning developed in a bad form. It was thought for a time that amputation of the limb would be necessary to save the child's life. The doctor has the case checked, but the swelling, which is enormous, has not been reduced.

A son, three years old, of Peter Ciancimino, of the El Dorado Casino, was bitten on Tuesday night, and by Wednesday evening, when Dr. Stillwagen was called, the child's face was swollen to nearly twice its natural size. The swelling has gone lown considerably since then, but the boy is by no means out of danger.

In all these cases the patients have suffered a great deal of pain.

Dr. Stillwagen says he does not know how to account for the remarkable malignancy of these mosquito bites. Not in his experience has he known of so many serious cases. It is thought that the mosquitoes have been in some poisonous shrub or flower or swamp.

The Lewisburg jail has 13 inmates, and only 6 cells fit for use.

Liver Troubles.

Dr. Radway & Co., New York:

Dear Sirs: I have been sick for nearly two years and have been doctoring with some of the most expert doctors of the United States. I have been bathing and drinking hot water at the Hot Springs, Ark., but it seemed everything failed to do me good. After I saw your advertisement I thought I would try your Pills, and have nearly used two boxes; been taking two at bedtime and one after breakfast, and they have done me more good than anything else I have used. My trouble has been with the liver. My skin and eyes were all yellow; I had sleepy, drowsy feelings; felt like a drunken man; pain right above the navel, like as if it was bile on top of the stomach. My bowels were very costive. My mouth and tongue sore most of the time. Appetite fair, but food would not digest, but settle heavy on my stomach, and some few mouthfels of food come up again. I could only eat light food that digests easily. Please send "Book of Advice." Respectfully, BEN ZAUGG,
Hot Springs, Ark.
