The production of "The Heart of Texas" at the London Opera House on Friday night was the best of the engagement. Mr. Villair and Miss Lewis appeared in leading roles and proved themselves refined and capable artists. The company carry special scenery for this play, and it was well staged and well put on. The play itself is well written, and is interesting and en-tertaining throughout—in fact, vastly more so than the usual run of melodrama, Miss Lewis, who is a handsome young woman, took the part of Texas Raymond, very acceptably, and carried out every situation in a finished manner. Her support of Mr. Villair, who appeared as Jack Harvey, was fully up to the standard of Mr. Villair's work, which was indeed good. Some very fine vaudeville was introduced be
