ANOTHER SIGNIFICANT ELECTION.

There was another portentous by-election yesterday in the United States. The Democrats carried the 32nd congressional district in New York State, which embraces the city of Rochester, by a majority of over 5,000. The district had been Republican for many years, the late representative having over 10,000 majority in 1908.

The successful Democratic candidate in yesterday's contest made tariff reform a campaign cry. The sequel is another unmistakable sign of the anti-Republican reaction, and the rising tide of feeling against the Payne-Aldrich tariff. Coming on top of Mr. Foss' sensational victory in Massachusetts, it will carry fresh dismay into the ranks of the "stand-patters." It will hearten the Democrats, and it is a moral victory for the insurgent Republicans.

If the Congressional elections were held tomorrow, the new House of Representatives would be overwhelmingly Democratic without a doubt. Unless something unforeseen happens in the meantime, this will be the result in November. The Republican party is paying the penalty of the violation of its anti-election pledges. It promised a revision of the tariff that would afford relief to consumers, and then mocked them by a mere pretence. Some of the oldest Republicans in the Senate and the House refused to accept the Payne-Aldrich law, and their open revolt has had a tremendous effect upon public opinion. President Taft seems to have made a tactical error by aggressively identifying himself with the Payne-Aldrich forces. Instead of quieting the insurgents he has widened the breach in the party ranks. The oppressive rise in the cost of living has also reinforced the agitation against the tariff. By the exercise of courage the Republican party might have retrieved itself and "disbanded the Democrats" on the tariff question, but the party machine is in the grip of the trusts and combines. The American people have borne so long and so patiently the exactions of McKinleyism and Dingleyism that the present insurrection must be surprising even to themselves.

THE LABOR VICTORY IN AUSTRALIA.

The unexpected has happened in Australia in the return to power of the Labor party, with a clear majority over both the Liberals and Conservatives. It has forty-five out of a total membership of seventy-five in the House of Representatives, and also controls the senate, an elective body of thirty-six members.

Since the formation of the Commonwealth, a decade ago, the Labor party has held the balance of power, the Liberals or the Conservatives holding office according to its pleasure. The withdrawal of its support caused the downfall of the Deakin ministry in November, 1908. The Labor Government, which succeeded that of Mr. Deakin, held office for six months by the grace of the Liberals, who declined to join hands with the Conservatives in opposing it. The refusal of Mr. Fisher, the Labor leader, in May of last year, to offer a Dreadnought to the British navy, on behalf of the Commonwealth, brought the two old parties together, and the first Labor Government fell. On the refusal of the governor-general to allow a dissolution and an appeal to the country the Fisher ministry and a Conservative-Liberal coalition government was formed.

The life of an Australian parliament is but three years, and the election of last week, therefore, came in the natural course of events. The result, has been most decisive, inasmuch as, for the first time in the comparatively brief history of the commonwealth, a party has been returned to power having a clear majority behind it in parliament—a party the chief plank in whose platform is "the securing of the full results of their industry to all producers by the collective ownership of monopolies and the extension of the state and municipality."

As the Liberals and Conservatives are united on the Dreadnought question alone, and are as far apart as the poles on, for instance, the trade question—the Liberals there being the protectionists and the Conservatives the free traders—it is not likely the opposition to the new Government will be formidable. The experiment of a Labor administration, untrammelled by alliances, will be an instructive study. The Australian Labor party is protectionist, but has a brand of its own. It proposes to regulate the tariff protection of a particular industry according to the wages it pays. The Laborites assume that a tariff enables a manufacturer to collect higher prices for his products, and that he should be compelled to share his advantages with his workmen. This seems to be an abandonment of the theory that internal competition will keep down prices. Higher wages can be paid only by raising prices or reducing profits; and it is impossible that the profits of manufacture in Australia can permanently rise above the average. If they did rise, competition in manufacture would be so stimulated by the prospect of high rewards that profits would fall to the normal level. The Australian Laborites also appear to lose sight of the distinction between real and nominal wages. The Government may be able to force up wages, measured in money, to an unexampled point, provided that manufacturers are permitted, under shelter of the tariff, to recoup themselves by raising prices accordingly. But the higher that prices go, the less will a dollar purchase. A workman will not be advantaged if his wages are doubled, and the cost of living doubled at the same time. There is a great deal to be said for the principle of the minimum wage, but its virtue would be lost if it were fixed so high that higher wages could not be held out as an inducement to extra exertion or ability.

A SENSIBLE ONLOOKER.

The London Times, after studying the Canadian-American tariff settlement, concludes that the balance of success rests with Canada. As a free trade journal, it is disposed to be jocose over the flourishing of revolution by the United States, Germany and France, with the result that not one of them gets any exclusive advantage, and that Great Britain, by the operation of the most-favored-nation clause, automatically secures everything that the other countries obtain, and without threats or fears or negotiations. The dealings of Canada with Germany, France and the United States, have, in the Nation's opinion, given striking evidence of Canada's absolute fiscal independence. Canada is now, it adds, in the fullest sense of the word, a nation. The prospect of closer commercial relations between this country and the United States is welcomed by this influential London journal, and it protests against the notion of some British tariff reform newspapers that Great Britain can "keep" her colonies for exclusive trading. "Whatever makes for Canadian prosperity, even if it develops her continental rather than her overseas trade, is indirectly a gain to us," says the Nation. "It must stimulate her growth and increase her value to us as a producer, as a consumer, and also as a client for our investments, while making her a politically powerful, as she is already a loyal, ally."

This is in refreshing contrast, not only to the comment of a portion of the British press, but of that of Canadian newspapers and politicians, who pretend to anti-imperial tendencies, even in the trifling reduction of duty upon American imports, which avowedly is a golden link between Great Britain and the United States, and the greater the material interest of the United States in this country, the more potent will Canada be in such a role. This was demonstrated in the recent tariff negotiations. The United States needs and wants Canada's goodwill.

The Republican party promised the people bread and gave them a stone. Now the party is being stoned.

The people of the United States are thoroughly aware that the Payne-Aldrich tariff is the Dingley nostrum with a new label on the bottle.

By the way, isn't it time that Mr. Beck began to show more interest in the Western University? Its friends have had no help from him, so far.

The Lloyd George budget would have yielded a surplus of $21,000,000 the first year if the peers had not laid violent hands on it. Its productivity is a tribute to its framers.

The Ottawa Free Press is urging local merchants to accept only clean bills from the banks. It has a shrewd idea that in this, as in other cases, the supply will meet the demand.

Agricultural societies in England are preparing to protest against Mr. Balfour's proposal to admit Canadian wheat free of duty. All imported wheat looks alike to the British farmer.

Manitoba has a university, Alberta has one, Saskatchewan will have one, British Columbia will have one. The Maritime Provinces have half a dozen. Ontario, with more population than all of them put together, has three, and the Premier of Ontario says it is one too many.

The Canadian navy will not leave Canada's shores without the consent of the Canadian Government. Some members of the Opposition and some of their journals have been screaming that this provision is a separatist one. But the Opposition yesterday challenged no vote on the issue. Why not?

A CALCULATING BACHELOR.

[London Daily News.]
An early example of a kind of advertisement that has since become the mainstay of certain periodicals—there are at least three "matrimonial" papers circulating semi-privately in this country—is thus quoted by the Observer from its file of a century ago:

"Matrimony—A gentleman of the strictest probity and honor, about 40, of unblemished character and respectable family, whose person, health, etc., will be found unexceptionable, is desirous of forming a matrimonial alliance with a lady of agreeable person and genteel manners, whose income (to be settled upon herself, together with his own, would be equal to the indulgence of a domestic and genteel life. However strange this mode of inquiry may appear, he has his reasons, and will explain them; and he has also the vanity to think that there are many ladies, did they but know the man, would embrace the opportunity of being united to one whose respectability and correct habits, combined with mind and temper, are calculated to render the marriage state truly happy. In negotiating this business, he pledges himself to the most scrupulous delicacy, honor and inviolable secrecy. Letters, post paid, stating particulars, to Mr. Weston, Circulating Library, Walsingham Place, Asylum Road, Lambeth, shall be respectfully attended to."

What elegant female, we wonder, secured this prize in the frantic competition for him which must have followed?

NOT ALL OF THEM.

[Exchange.]
She—The fashionable color for the spring will be called messenger boy blue.
He—Why that name?
She—Because it's guaranteed not to run.

HIS CAUSTIC COMMENT.

[Judge.]
"Educational facilities were not so good in the early days as they are now."
"No," admitted the grouchy citizen, "they were not. I was 16 years old before I knew as much as my father. The kids today reach that stage at 10."

HUBBY AGAIN.

[Chicago Post.]
"My dear," says the fond wife, "you really should allow me to buy the things for the house."
"I haven't been buying anything for the house."
"Yes, you have. Now you know you paid $1 for that new dresser, and Mrs. Nexius bought one for 15 cents that registers four degrees below zero every day."

HOOT AWAY, MON!

[Boston Transcript.]
An English clergyman, talking one day with a Scottish brother of the cloth, remarked facetiously, "Well, David, I believe, after all has been said, that my head could hold two of yours."
"Mon," returned the other, with ready wit, "I never thought before that your head was so empty."

TRUE POLITENESS.

[Success Magazine.]
One evening, as the mother of a little niece of Phillips Brooks was tucking her child in bed, a caller was announced. The mother told the child to say her prayers, and promised to be back in a few minutes. When she returned she asked the child if she had done as she was bidden. "Well, you see, mamma, I was awfully sleepy, so I just asked God if he wouldn't excuse me tonight, and he said, 'Certainly, don't mention it, Miss Brooks.'"

THE CABINET A TRUST.

The cabinet council, when has to pass on legislation proposed by the Labor Department, is something of an editorial board. It is made up of an editorial writer and reporter of Halifax, Frank Oliver, pioneer editor and type slinger of the west; George P. Graham, another output of the Ottawa Free Press; "Bill" Thompson, the aristocratic publisher of Astor-Victoria; Rodolphe Lemieux, who knows something about delinquent subscribers; and Sidney Fisher, newspaper owner and a real estate possessor over them. It is said that the days when he was just a cub reporter.

More power to these combined!

A LAW-ABIDING CHILD.

[Tit-Bits.]
A health officer recently received the following note from one of the residents of his district:
"Dear Sir, I beg to inform you that my child, aged eight months, is suffering from measles as required by act of parliament."

THE DOCTOR'S FAULT.

[Philadelphia Bulletin.]
Judge—I am led to understand you sold the watch of the doctor who had just written a prescription for you at the free dispensary. What have you to say to this charge?
Prescriber—Well, your honor, I found myself in a desperate quandary. His prescription said "a spoonful every hour," and I had no droppers.

PLENTY OF THEM.

[Smart Set.]
"Did your wealthy old uncle have many helms?"
"Oh, yes. A new hair looms up almost every week."

TAKING CHARGES.

[Boston Transcript.]
Maud—I have a message to me three times before I accepted him.
Kate—You were always a reckless girl, Maud.

THE HERO.

[Puck.]
"Sir, I wish to make your daughter my wife."
The old man hesitated. "Hadin't you better see her mother first?" he asked, gently, after thinking a moment.
"I've seen her mother, and it doesn't make any difference," the young man declared. "She exclaimed the youth, with all the ardor of honest love."

GREED.

[Punch.]
"I had a great dream the other night. I dreamed I met a man who offered to cut me a pound slice of radium."
"What?" It's worth more'n a million an ounce!"
That's right. "Want a slice?" he says to me. "Yes, I answered. But I was too grasping."
"How was that?"
"I woke up just as I asked him to cut it thick!"

ENCOURAGING.

[London Daily News.]
Ted—Are you making any progress in your love affair with that young widow?
Ned—It looks that way. She has just put on second mourning.

POSSIBLY.

[Washington Star.]
"Why does that man always look fierce and shout when he talks on the wrong side of an argument?"
"I don't know," replied Senator Sorghum. "Sometimes I think he's trying to scare his conscience into silence."

SOMETHING WANTING.

[The Delinquent.]
Two-year-old Harry had never seen a lamb, his only knowledge of the animal being derived from a toy one on wheels. While visiting grandpa on the farm he was taken to the sheep pen to see the lambs. After looking at them for a few minutes he looked up at grandpa with a puzzled expression and asked, "Where's the wheels?"

NO ARREST LIKELY IN THE BEST CASE

Detectives Have Found That the Story Told by the Husband Has Been Verified.

Windsor, April 19.—Arthur Best, of Harrow, Ont., was in the city yesterday to await any new developments in the drowning case of his wife, whose body was found on Sunday after being in the water for five weeks. Detectives are still working on the case, but have found that the story which Best told on the witness stand has been verified in every detail. Chief of Detectives McDermott, declared that there was not enough evidence against him to warrant an attempt at extraditing him, while with the evidence on hand, it would be hard to prove whether Mrs. Best cast herself into the river or was forced in. His arrest is not looked for. The request has been adjourned until Friday.

COMMITTEE AT WORK ON EIGHT-HOUR BILL

Ottawa, April 19.—The special committee under the chairmanship of the minister of labor, which has been taking evidence respecting the eight-hour bill, is applying to the Government works, will do nothing in respect to it this session, insofar as making a recommendation is concerned. A good deal of evidence has been taken and data collected, and this will be printed in both languages and distributed during the recess. Next session it is intended to reappoint the committee, and it will then report. The manufacturers and employers have been heard in opposition to the bill and several witnesses in support of it. The Dominion Trades and Labor Congress will present its evidence favoring the measure at tomorrow's sitting.

DOHERTY YESTERDAY IN FOSTER'S SEAT

Ottawa, April 19.—Ex-Judge Doherty (St. Anne's Methodist), took the seat on Mr. Borden's left hand when the House met this morning. This seat has been occupied for years by Hon. Geo. E. Foster as the first lieutenant of the leader of the Opposition. Some days ago Mr. Doherty, in the absence of Mr. Borden, led the Opposition, but today was the first time that he took

Starvation Amid Plenty

NOT UNCOMMON TODAY — THE REASON IS EXPLAINED.

"For a period of last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge of Bloombury. "The heat had made me listless, and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed, their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

His father before him was an official of the hall.
