UNITED STATES TARIFF

Delegation From Manufacturers Ask President to Recommend a Commission

Washington, Feb. 5.—About thirty representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers conferred with President Roosevelt today, in pursuance of their desire to have him send to congress a special message recommending legislation providing for a tariff commission...

After the conference James Van Cleave of St. Louis, chairman of the organization, announced that a pledge of entire secrecy regarding the conference had been taken. It is said at the White House that no special message on the subject of a tariff commission would be sent to congress by the president.

The delegation seemed satisfied with their interview and some of them went so far as to say that it would be unsafe to predict that there would be no special message.

WOULD STOP WORK ON MONDAY PAPERS

Winnipeg Police Take in Newspaper Offices on Sunday Round

Winnipeg, Feb. 5.—The Attorney-General was today supplied with a list of 232 names by the chief of police in connection with the Sunday newspaper strike.

These are the cases in which flats are requested permitting prosecution for alleged violation of the Sunday newspaper law.

The names of the newspaper men, some of whom were engaged in editing during the day, local matters delivered during the day for the Monday morning paper, when their offices were invaded by the police, it is said, have been left on the list of those slated for prosecution.

The police commission will hold a session tomorrow morning, at which this will be discussed. There is a very considerable feeling throughout the city that these cases will be in the nature of a complete test of the law as applied in Winnipeg under this act.

TALK ON TARIFF AT WASHINGTON

Senator Beveridge Pleads For Non-Partizan Revising Commission

Policy of Republicans

Majority Leader Payne Says They Will Call for Tariff Revision

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana today delivered an appeal to the senate to adopt his bill providing for a non-partizan tariff revising commission. A plan which he conformed to modern and business methods on this subject. He spoke for an hour and a half, receiving the careful attention of the senators and a large audience in the gallery.

There were present many delegates to commercial bodies, and the ministers of the press. Following Senator Beveridge's address, several Democratic senators spoke briefly on the general subject of the tariff, and the senate adjourned until tomorrow.

Tariff revision and the President's recent special message to congress were the main topics of discussion in the House of Representatives today, as has been the case nearly every day for a week. The appropriation bill was before the house, but in no quarter was any word spoken in regard to it. The house apparently had made up its mind to discontinue the bill at this time, and no effort was made to check the flow of general debate, which will be continued tomorrow.

A long speech by Mr. Payne of New York, the majority leader, was considered important because of his assurances that a tariff revision plan would be incorporated in the Republican national platform of this year. He devoted some attention to Mr. Bryan, whom he credited with going about the country accusing Bryan of being a purveyor of grand or petit larceny in purloining his ideas.

Several of the Democratic measures introduced at the session were criticized by Mr. Payne, including one to place inotypes, wood pulp and white paper on the free list.

When the time came for tariff revision, said Mr. Payne, he would be willing to give all the paper interests a fair hearing, and if necessary for the protection of labor to keep the duty there, do it. "If, however," he continued, "it was not necessary to do it, I would be willing to give the free list. But I do not propose to do it without intelligent action and accurate information."

Speaking generally, Mr. Payne charged that the Democratic party is a party of negotiation. As far as the Republicans are concerned, he said, the polls next November with a platform that meant something. They would declare on the tariff question with no uncertainty in the future.

"I do not mind saying today," he said, "that it seems to me that I will call for a revision of the tariff."

Public applause, which continued for some time, greeted his utterance. "The strongest reason impelling the Republicans," he said, "is the feeling that we need a maximum and minimum tariff for the purpose of negotiating paper trade agreements. If we have a maximum and minimum tariff, as the Republican party passes it, the tariff will be a tariff protection of every American industry and every American laborer in the United States."

Conductor Arrested. Montreal, Feb. 5.—William Foster Bottomley, conductor on the Grand Trunk railway, was arrested today on the charge of criminal negligence in connection with the death of Fireman Symonds, as the result of a collision between two freight trains at St. Martin's Junction a few days ago.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—The annual statement of the Toronto street railway, submitted to the board of directors today, shows an increase in operating expenses of one per cent over 1906, but a decrease in salaries. WOES OF POVERTY IN A GREAT CITY

Severe Weather Brings Distressing Scenes in Crowded New York

New York, Feb. 5.—After having dropped to a new record mark for the season, the temperature late today lifted just enough to shunt loose the "great" winter snow that New Yorkers have seen this winter.

The advent of the snow was timed to catch the homeward bound trolleys, on as nearly "perfect" winter morning as could be imagined.

Nearly all day the weather held crisp and clear, and the snow on the Fifth Avenue throng, filled the park and invited tens of thousands to stay on the park benches, the charitable societies were doling out mercy on the "other side" of New York life. Penetrating just as the snow fell, the floor of a tenement, agents of the Children's Society found a mother and two children huddled about a fireless stove, merely waiting death from starvation and cold. Lena Brown, 47, and her children, aged 4, 3, and 2, were found in a room, their hands clutching the stove in which the fire had long since died. A stove and a broken down rocker constituted the furniture, and there was no food in the place.

Two women were found dead in the kitchen of a house at 251 West 71st street, which they were caretakers. They were Mrs. Margaret Meep, 70 years old, and Mrs. Margaret Kelly, 40 years old. For many years they had been frugal in their habits, and had a bin in the cellar containing 17 cents worth of food. The police say they think the women sat by a stove in front of which they were trying to keep warm, till as the fire went out, and froze to death.

CHANGE SECURES QUIET AT LISBON

Popular Clamor Dies Down Before Restoration of Old Conditions

Young King's Character

Revolutionaries in Oporto Engage in Brief Demonstration

London, Feb. 5.—The announced intention of the new cabinet to put an end to repression and restore the "old liberal monarchy," which has existed in Portugal for sixty years, has had a soothing and quieting effect on the country. Tranquility is restored everywhere in the interior, and today Lisbon, basking in the brilliant sunshine, seems perfectly peaceful.

Troops are less conspicuous on the streets of the city today, and if the funerals take place on Saturday without incident, the present phase of the crisis through which the country is passing may be regarded as at an end. The willingness of Senhor Macdonald, the republican leader, and the republicans generally, to acquiesce in the present situation, if their friends are released, seems to ensure a return to less strenuous methods of political warfare. Generally speaking, another appeal in the near future is considered practically impossible.

Francisco's Eclipse. Intense interest is shown in Francisco's whereabouts. Speculations centre about him, but he remains in secrecy, seemingly crushed in spirit. He declines to see correspondents or to offer a defence for his policy and to explain his downfall or his decision to retire from the political arena. He is regretted by the young king. To a lifelong friend of his father, King Amelie shared the view that the dictatorship had been carried too far. She is said to have remonstrated with him that it might end in a tragedy, and argued in behalf of a milder course of policy, of which her own family had suffered.

On the day of the assassinations, amidst the confusion of that memorable scene in the arsenal quadrangle, where King Manuel's body was turned beside herself with grief, she turned upon Francisco and cried "This is what your work has done."

This utterance, with the influence represented, is believed to furnish the true key to the secret of Francisco's downfall.

King Manuel. The young sovereign's personality is described by those who knew him as very winning. As a lad he displayed fine many traits. He has considerable artistic talents, especially for music, and, like his father, is exceedingly fond of outdoor sports, such as tennis, riding and shooting. He was reared with great care by those devoted to the education of the warmest interest in the education of the prince, both of whom spoke English, French, Spanish and Italian fluently. The king's English tutor speaks the praise of the king and his father. "They were ideal young men," he said, and then told an anecdote illustrative of the king's gentle nature. As the prince he had always spoken to the queen as "her majesty." One day, however, he used the term, "mother." Then he turned to the tutor and said: "I think I like the word 'mother' best. I read last night that the queen was lost in the wife, the wife in the mother."

Quiet at Lisbon. The foreign newspaper correspondent from London, Paris and Berlin also coming into Lisbon. They seem disappointed at finding that the country is not in the throes of a revolution. The only telegraphic news ready are swamped, and there are many delays incident to the flood of telegrams. Increased precautions have been taken by the authorities to prevent the spread of false or alarming reports. Both commercial and press telegrams are examined to see that they conform to the regulations forbidding the transmission of anything inimical to the public security or irreverent to the royal family.

Funeral Arrangements. The funerals of the late king and crown prince on Saturday will be attended with ceremonies of impressive dignity and with a display of the full mourning pageantry which attends the obsequies of Portuguese monarchs. The ceremonies will begin at ten o'clock in the morning. From the chapel of the Necessidades palace, where the bodies have reposed since Sunday, the bodies will be conveyed to the church of San Vicente do Fora, two miles distant. The procession will be long and impressive. After the bodies have lain in state for three days in the church of San Vicente the coffins will be carried through the cloister to the royal pantheon, where rest the remains of the princes of the illustrious House of Braganza.

Outbreak at Oporto. Madrid, Feb. 5.—A special despatch received here from Lisbon states that revolutionaries in Oporto made a sudden and determined attack upon the city hall. They took the municipal guard by surprise, and succeeded in forcing an entrance. They were, however, short-lived, as reinforcements of police soon arrived and drove out the revolutionaries and tore
