PRISON REFORM
The Parole System and the Education of Criminals Working Out Well

Mr. W. P. Archibald, Dominion parole officer, in an address on Prison Reform said that there were crimes whose very enormity and atrocity made it an impossibility for man to do other than wreak vengeance upon the criminal. If a crime was atrocious enough man will not forgive; from God alone was there any hope of forgiveness.

Students of criminology, he continued, said, "Once a criminal, always a criminal." This, averred Mr. Archibald, was not so. The criminal mind could be reclaimed by community with man. Illustrating this, he cited the case of an old man, a murderer, who had been spared the agony of hanging and the reproaches of a guilty conscience when he believed that God had pardoned him and answered his prayers.

The speaker then stated that there were 1500 men in the penitentiaries and jails of Canada. These men, he declared, were being given a chance; they were being taught industries and trades, and given a common school education. The old idea of vengeance was gone; nowadays the prisons were readjusting the mental balance of the criminal by subjecting him to new environments and giving him new ideas so that the best of crime was a forgotten memory. Many criminals were the result of heredity, and in cases like this there was little hope for them.

The perpetrators of crimes that were the result of temptation or impulse were the easiest subjects for reform; upon them the exercise of reformative elements met with much success. It was the criminal who had been moulded from childhood into a career of crime, whose whole life had been spent in daily contemplation of criminal acts until his conception of right and wrong had become as nothing, that was the big problem. There were a few of these criminals in Canada, but in older countries they abounded.

From long observation Mr. Archibald said he had found the criminal highly responsive to kindness. Criminals could be reformed by kindness alone. In the penitentiaries today manual labor was giving way to higher training. Many prisoners were being given the chance to reform through the parole system. By this system the men were freed and placed on parole with the chance to become once more useful and respectable citizens. In 15 years 1,713 men had been released on parole; of these, only 79 had gone back to crime. These facts, he affirmed, knocked the theory held by criminologists, "Once a criminal, always a criminal," on the head and showed that the way to reform society was not to wreak vengeance on the offender but to purify his mind and restore him to the community a changed man.

OLD PUBLIC SERVANT
Mr. Hillier Closely Connected With Ontario's Legal Affairs For Years

After 42 years spent in the service of the Ontario Government, Mr. George Hillier resigned his position as housekeeper of the middle wing of Osgoode Hall, Toronto. The resignation is the result of the understood intention of the Government to appoint a single superintendent over the whole building.

Mr. Hillier entered the service of the Government as messenger at the Government House in 1869. He served there as head messenger, or butler, under four Lieutenant-Governors, and was then made housekeeper at Osgoode Hall, where he remained for 30 years. Skill and personal attention to the conveniences of the judges made him invaluable to the dispensers of justice in Ontario. One of the marvels of his work was the way he handled some two or three hundred keys without tags.

Mr. Hillier is 65 years old and an Englishman by birth. He has many tales to tell concerning his experiences with the grand ladies and gentlemen he met during his service in Government House. He was chosen by the Lieutenant-Governor to be one of the personal servants of the present Duke of Connaught when he visited Canada as Prince Arthur years ago, and toured the province in the Prince's special train. His recollections of that visit are vivid and interesting.

ANTHQUITY OF HYMNS
While hymns as we know them today are a comparatively recent innovation in church services, they are a very ancient institution, and existed long before the Christian era. Many important collections of hymns date back to about five hundred years before Christ, though, of course, hymns existed long before that period. Among the collections which have come down to us from then are the Sanskrit "Rig Veda," a Chinese "Book of Odes," the "Buddhist Hymns," the Grecian "Homeric Hymns," and the "Hymns of Pindar." "The Latin Hymns," or hymns of the western church, date from the fourth to the twentieth centuries, while the "Latin Hymns," or hymns of the eastern church, date from the sixteenth century. The hymns which play so prominent a part in the services of the modern Protestants were not in wide general use until about 1800.

BEER IN CHINA
The attempt of a corporation or gangster in Hongkong with foreign capital, largely from Honolulu, to establish a brewing business on the South Asiatic coast was unsuccessful. The concern erected a modern brewery on a portion of the mainland opposite Hongkong in 1909, but drew money from the beginning and went into voluntary liquidation. For a time there was some reason to expect the successful introduction of beer among the Chinese of Hongkong. Sales of the company's output increased considerably, and growing popularity gave some practical ground for anticipating a change in Chinese tastes. The fact finally became plain, however, that for the time being the Chinese do not take to beer.

IT GROWS HAIR
Every Man or Woman can
Have an Abundance of hair
Full of Life and Beauty

Mrs. J. Harris, Wappella, Sask., writes, "I have found PARISIAN Sage to be the best scalp and hair tonic I have ever known. After using two bottles the itching and dandruff disappeared and my hair ceased to fall out."

PARISIAN Sage does not contain Sarsaparilla, a poison that often causes blood poisoning and sometimes death. Ask your dealer if he can guarantee some other hair preparation not to contain Lead or Nitrate of Silver.

PARISIAN Sage is not a dye. Most dyes are poisonous. It is a hair nourisher, grows the hair and keeps it healthy naturally, keeps hair from falling, and keeps it soft and glossy.

Among the vocations open to members of the European peacemakers' league in Canada is assuming a foremost position. British Peers have entered into farming near Pickering, and now Vincent George De Mauduit, a prominent French nobleman, and son of Count Hugh De Mauduit, director of the staff of the Ministry of the Interior, Paris, has left his native country to take up a fruit farm at Forest, Ont. His intention is to purchase a farm in the vicinity of Forest at $25,000.

The idea of farming was brought before him while he was living in London, England, by the Commissioner of the Ontario Government in the Metropolis.

A SNAKE LEAPS FROM MILK BOTTLE
Montreal Woman is Scared and Sends Word to Health Department.

Montreal, Aug. 31.—After opening a bottle of milk this morning Mrs. Rosario Lamothe, Workman St., was horrified when a small snake sprang to the ground and lay there hissing. Having recovered from her fright, Mrs. Lamothe telegraphed the health department which sent an inspector to the house to kill the reptile.

The snake was of the harmless variety, and it is supposed that it either fell into a milk pail or was in the water with which the bottle was washed.

THE DEATH ORCHID
Explorer's Weird Story of Mysterious Flower of Venezuela

The death orchid of the Venezuelan Indians has been proved to be no mere campfire yarn. Three years ago an orchid hunter, Grayson, set out to find "El Lugar de las Flores Venenosas," that is, "The Place of the Poisonous Flowers," which was said to be located in the dense and pestilential wilderness occupying the vast stretches between the head waters of the Orinoco and the Andes.

Two weeks passed without any incident out of the ordinary. But one morning there was a perceptible smell of flowers in the air. When the orchid hunter, Grayson, stepped out that night the jungle smells had been entirely lost in the cloying scent. Many of the band refused to go further.

As Grayson and the others proceeded the rankly sweet and oppressive odor became stronger, attacking the senses like a narcotic. One after another the remaining Indians collapsed, till only Grayson and the guide were left pushing forward.

The orchid hunter felt as if he were being attacked by the insidious power of opium, but retained enough consciousness to become aware that, gleaming through the trees ahead, he saw flowers of huge size and vivid colors, many hued clusters of them hanging in trails. It was the death orchid.

When he recovered his senses he found himself being carried back to camp, where the rest of his porters had remained. Many of the band were severely sick, and many half-witted with the continued effect of the scent.

PTOMAIN POISONING
Belling Does Not Kill The Deadly Germ in Food

The outbreaks often known as "ptomaine poisoning" are divided by Dr. J. Burger of Berlin into three classes. In the first, minute bacteria, resembling the typhus bacillus, are the cause of poisoning, and may have infected living cattle, etc., or may have been brought by rats, mice, flies or impure water to meat, fish, bread, cake, vegetables and other food.

Eating the infected food sometimes gives rise to symptoms of intestinal catarrh, sometimes to those of typhus or cholera.

The second class of poisoning results from eating decayed meat and other foods, and is due to a specific rod-shaped organism, the bacillus botulinus, and may come from infected ham, salt fish, tinned meat, etc.

This bacillus does not grow in living flesh, so only the poison it has developed in dead meat is to be feared. This is very fatal, however, and forty per cent. of the poisonings result in death.
