A Dual Marriage—Miss M. E. Rutherford and Mr. Alex. Ford—Miss Ada Rutherford and Mr. Geo. S. Crawford-A Brilliant Assem-

A double marriage is an event of no con mon occurence, and much interest attache to it when the contracting parties move in the upper pale of fashion's whirl. The dual hymenal event of yesterday caused a great stir in society and afforded a pleasing sight and lots of excitement for a large number of maids and matrons, with a fair sprinkling of young men who perhaps contemplate marriage.

THE FIRST EVENT. As early as 10 o'clock carriages began to pull up at the main entrance to St. Michael's cathedral, and out of them came handsomely dressed men and women, while Policemen Arthur Taylor and Bowers graciously kept the drizzling rain off the costly headgear of the ladies with their umbrellas. At five minutes to eleven a carriage containing four pretty young ladies drove up, and a whisper went through the crowd "the bridesmaids." A through the crowd "the bridesmaids." A few seconds afterwards came the bride, Miss Ada Rutherford, daughter of Mr. E. A. Rutherford of "Northfield," Jarvis street. The groom, Mr. Geo. S. Crawford, cashier of the bank of Montreal, was in readiness and the party moved up the centre aisle, while the organ pealed forth a wedding march. The bridal party repaired when the party repaired when t to the vestry in rear of the altar, where the ceremony was performed by Archbishop Lynch, assisted by Chancellor McCann. Lynch, assisted by Chancellor McCann.
The altar was nicely illuminated, but the crowd in the church were disappointed that the ceremony took place out of sight. They were, however, well rewarded by hearing Miss Tillie Myers render in splendid style the Ave Maria by Nicolai and O Salutaris by Bassini, with organ accompaniments by Mr. Lemaitre. When the party emerged from the vestry again the wedding march sounded out.

THE SECOND CEREMONY. THE SECOND CEREMONY.

All attention was now turned to St.

James' cathedral, where the sister of Miss Ada—beg pardon, she was Mrs. Ada then—Miss M. E. Rutherford was to be joined in wedlock with Mr. Alex. Ford, barrister. When the party arrived at the church about 11.20 a great crowd had assembled, and although it was very sloppy outside and slushy shoes the rule, it did not preand although it was very sloppy outside and slushy shoes the rule, it did not prevent the throng from utilizing the cushionsed seats as a means of elevation to see all that was going on. When the party entered the main aisle, the bride leaning on her fathers' arm, Mendelsshon's War March came forth from the great organ overhead. The marriage ceremony here was performed by Bishop Sweetnam, assisted by Rev. O. P. Ford, brother of the groom. The first part of the service was read by Mr. Ford, and the ceremony was repeated in the case of Mr. Crawford and his bride, he of course being a Roman Catholic. Mr. Doward, the organist, had a splendid musical program arranged and consisted of the March Romaine by Gunod, the March of the Prophete by Meyerbeer, and Mendelsshon's Wedding March at the close.

The dresses and attending march at the committee would do justice to the country and the railroad.

Scheme for Amalgamating the Toronto, Grey and Bruce and Grand Trunk railways,

The railway committee was yesterday agreement for amalgamation between th Toronto, Grey and Bruce and Grand Trunk railway companies. Nearly all the mem bers were in their places, and there were number of railway men and lawyers present for and against the bill.

The bill recites the act of last session authorizing the amalgamation of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce with any other company or companies, provided that the assent of at least two-thirds of the shareholders were obtained, and that the company of at least two-thirds of the snareholders were obtained, and that the company should not enter into such agreement with the Northern, North Western or Great Western company, unless with the consent of the lieut-governor in council, and that before such consent should be given the

Mr. Chisholm, reeve of Owen Sound, and director of the road, representing the country of Grey, said that when the county aided the road to the extent of $300,000 they were promised that it would be an independent road, and were strongly opposed to any scheme which would destroy the companition with the Grand Trunk.

Mr. S. H. Blake, Q.C., for the bill contended the word "shareholder." The meeting of the company at which the agreement was ratified was not a general meeting of the company, but a meeting for a special purpose, and there was nothing in any act relating to the company from which the rights of bondholders to interfere in such an esting could be inferred. He contrasted the forcible appeal made bythe representatives of the constituencies with the requests of speculators who had purchased the bonds, and he trusted that the committee would do justice to the country and the county and the contrasted the would do justice to the country and the county and the contrasted the would do justice to the country and the county and th

A gentleman from Ottawa, well inform ed in politics and a conservative, says Sir John has made a mistake in his attitude on the boundary question. But he says he was forced into it by the "bleus" of Quebec. The means by which Sir John will release himself is to get the boundary question in as an issue between Ontario and Manitoba and then bring pressure on Norquay, the premier of Manitoba, to give in to Ontario. By this means Ontario will get her own, Mr. Meredith and his followers will have a chance to straighten themselves before the people of the province, and Manitoba will get some "better terms," and the "bleus" will be "sold."
