

BANNY JOBS.

She was christened Fanny Ann, and her last name was Jones. Not that she had any particular right to it, for I took her out of the poor-house, but every one must have a name you know. And when Mr. Jones left this wicked world, and I took a few select boarders—a thing I'd never thought of in the world—why I needed help. But you may be good to those charity children, and never get anything but trouble for it. I can't tell what I did for that girl. She was bound to me until she was sixteen, and I felt it my duty. She always wore nice long aprons that covered her from her neck to her toes, and good cowhide boots. I never allowed her to be idle. She was up at five, washing windows and making fire, and in the evening I made her sew and knit. She never had a lazy moment, so that can't account for her wickedness; but as for being pretty—no, indeed. My Lavonia was pretty; she wasn't. Viny and Fanny Ann were just the same age.
