TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 13, 1885.

From the Montreal Herald, Oct. 10.

We publish in another column an article from The Toronto World prophesying the decadence of Montreal. That "Westward the course (not the star), of empire takes its way," may be very true to a certain extent, but our talente I young contemporary in endeavoring talente I young contemporary in so to so to illustrate this poetical aphorism is not so to ing influence, that it "will not name," as having destroyed Quebec and now destroying Montreal, but dismisses this from its argument to fall back on the more solid reason that Toronto has a choice of seaports, i.e., via the Toronto has a choice of seaports, i.e., via the Toronto has a choice of seaports, i.e., via the Toronto's trade via the 'St. Lawrence would Toronto's trade via the 'St. Lawrence would also figure as Montreal trade The World does not say, but if everything else fails Quebec ports must perforce benefit by so much of Toronto's future additional greatness as comes by this route. But if the port of New York is to turn the scale when Toronto shall have got a balance with Montreal is it not as near to this city as to Toronto, I Indeed, in a race between the two cities, with New Yorks as a starting point the existence of Hamilton at the way of one of them. When the starting post is on the St. Lawrence, Montreal ought to be at least at equal advantage. The World says that the Grand Trunk's interests to the west of Toronto are constantly increasing and the Bank of Montreal, if wise, is to use more obtained from Toronto, some further elucidation of this point would seem to be necessary. The Grand Trunk's interests to the seem to be necessary. The Grand Trunk's interests to the onto the Bank of Montreal, if wise, is to use more capital there, but "all these things aside" in the way of one of them. Toronto, and the Bank of Montreal, if wise, is to use more capital there, but "all these Montreal and Toronto.

We still stick to our opinion delivered in Toronto for the same figures and in the same time as at Montreal, and then be 333 miles (the distance between the cities) nearer the western consumers, and the retailer who buys them is just that much nearer the market. Ontario storekeepers by the hundreds drop into Toronto in the morning before 10 and are home the same evening. They think of Canadian ultra-loyalists, such as the bulk of the wholesale business of Ontario; but Toronto is now the railway hub of the province and trade is naturally flowing province and trade is naturally flowing measure taken for a new wig. in to our merchants, especially when they
